Smuggling of outlawed cancer drug grows

By EVERETT R. HOLLES
New York Times Service

SAN DIEGO — Customs officials have uncovered what they describe as an international smuggling operation using German and Mexican connections to supply cancer sufferers in the United States and Canada with large quantities of a drug outlawed in both countries as a worthless nostrum.

Traffic across the Mexican border in the illicit medication, most generally known as laetrile but also sold under a half dozen other names, including Krebiozen, was said by an investigator to exceed, in volume, the Mexican brown heroin reaching addicts in the U.S.

Prohibited from interstate shipment since 1963 by the Food and Drug Administration, which contends it has no demonstrated value in combating cancer, the smuggled laetrile is obtained from laboratories in Tijuana, Mexico, and Munich, Germany.

Mexico and Germany are among 23 countries where the drug, made from an extract of apricot pits and rich in cyanide, can be freely manufactured and legally used in cancer therapy.

The international trafficking in the drug was said to have assumed major proportions since a crackdown on its manufacture in clandestine laboratories in California where its production and use in treating malignancies was banned by state law a decade ago.

A federal grand jury here has begun an investigation of the alleged conspiracy, based on evidence gathered by customs operatives working with postal inspectors, the FDA and the California Bureau of Food and Drugs.

Evidence assembled for the grand jury, according to Assistant U.S. Atty. Herbert B. Hoffman, involves persons on both sides of the Mexican border and overseas, including Mexican and American "mules" — many of them women — who do the actual smuggling, principally through the gates of the Tijuana-San Ysidro border crossing.

We have discovered far exceeds what we anticipated when the investigation began," Hoffman said.

A customs inspector said 20 to 30 major distributors appeared to be employed by the smuggling ring across the U.S. and Canada, as well as a number of doctors and a corps of lesser dealers, many of whom are themselves cancer sufferers and easily recruited.

A Customs Service report on the scope of the international laetrile smuggling, obtained by the New York Times, identifies, among some 35 others, three men long prominent in dealings in the drug and agitation for its legalization.

"The magnitude of the smuggling conspiracy that

Calif. leading U.S. road toll

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

California led the nation in holiday traffic deaths late Sunday with 23 in spite of Highway Patrol escorts from Los Angeles to Las Vegas.

Seven of the deaths were in the Southland.

Wire services reported a national toll of 244 traffic deaths, 76 drownings and 40 deaths from other accidents.

States trailing California in traffic deaths, in order, were Texas, 19, Ohio, 15, and Michigan, 14.

The National Safety Council had predicted 400 to 500 persons would die in traffic accidents between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight tonight.

AMONG THE Southland fatalities were two motorcyclists who died in separate accidents in the mountains, and two men who were killed by out-of-control cars in different accidents.

Highway Patrol officers said one of the cyclists, 21-year-old Charles Russell Miller of Highland Park, died when he lost control of his vehicle on Angeles Forest Highway and veered into the path of an oncoming car.

Officers said he took a curve too fast, crossed onto the wrong side of the road, then overcorrected and slipped onto the unpaved shoulder. His cycle then shot into the path of the oncoming car and he was knocked 50 feet, officers said. The driver of the car was not cited or held.

Another motorcyclist died north of Gorman on Interstate 5, when he changed lanes and his vehicle flipped on its side, highway patrolmen said.

The victim, Danny Meek, 27, of North Hollywood, was run over by a companion who was unable to avoid hitting the fallen cyclist, officers said.

BOTH MOTORCYCLES burst into flames, but Meek's companion, identified only as George Marquez, suffered only minor injuries.

Earlier, 37-year-old Miguel Sanchez of Highland Park was killed when he was run over by an uncontrolled car as he sat on a bench at the edge of a Maywood market parking lot.

Police said a 15-year-old boy sitting in a parked car turned on the car's ignition so he could listen to the radio, but the car slipped into gear and backed over the bench.

Another out-of-control vehicle, a racing stock car at Saugus Speedway, killed an official after it rolled over a retaining wall at a curve.

Israeli jets join Lebanon battle

United Press International
Israeli warplanes streaked across southern Lebanon Sunday to help ground troops fighting Lebanese army and artillery units in a 15-hour battle, the biggest clash between the two nations in nearly three years.

A military spokesman in Beirut said seven Lebanese soldiers were killed and three wounded. He reported at least five Israelis were killed and "an undetermined number" wounded.

Israeli officials in Tel Aviv refused to disclose casualties, but Israeli television said two soldiers were killed in the first exchange of fire after the troops crossed into Lebanon.

A Tel Aviv military spokesman said more than 200 infantrymen and a few air force jets were used in the battle. He did not say if they bombed, strafed or merely made low-flying passes.

The battle came at a time when Lebanon was experiencing its worst civil strife since its 1958 civil war. Palestinian guerrillas and right-wing Phalangists battled each other in Beirut during the night with rockets, mortars and bombs, killing at least seven persons to bring the five-day toll to 57 dead and 176 wounded.

U.S. airline closes in Laos; more evacuated

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)

— An American airline company on contract to the U.S. government closed its doors Sunday and another was down to one-third its former size as the hasty dismantling of American interests in Laos continued.

More than 500 Americans, most of them women and children, have been evacuated from Communist-dominated Laos in the past week, with about 80 leaving Sunday following searches by students and police. Another 400 to 500 Americans still remain.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said Bird Air — which had provided the U.S. mission here with six Bell Jet Ranger utility helicopters — flew out its equipment and about 10 American employees and closed its operation in Laos.

Bird Air, with headquarters in Oakland, Calif., has been under contract to the U.S. government in various parts of Southeast Asia and was one of the commercial airlines which flew supplies into Phnom Penh before the Khmer Rouge takeover last month.

Larry Joseph, an official of Continental Air Services, said his company was down to two fixed-wing aircraft from the original six which were on exclusive contract to the U.S. mission. Joseph said that Continental had no immediate plans to shut down and that the U.S. Embassy had asked it to keep two planes in Laos to provide possible medical evacuations and other emergency services.

The embassy spokesman said the mission no longer needed large-scale air support since its field operations in Laos had ended following student demonstrations and intensified Pathet Lao activity.

Burns, Ullman split on economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy is in the process of turning around and there are signs of beginning economic recovery, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns said Sunday.

But Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted unemployment will go even higher before the real turn begins, late this year and next.

Burns, appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said he feels the nation is "in a turning zone, and I think this is a time to pause as far as fiscal policy is concerned."

He said action on tax cuts and rebates has applied a strong stimulus to the economy and there have been increases in consumer purchases and home buying and other signs of improvement.

Burns said his board, which regulates the amount of credit available to banks from the Federal Reserve System and thus the nation's money supply, is trying to steer a middle course of fighting recession without increasing inflation.

For 10 years the nation has gone through a hectic period of inflation and, thus, the board has lost some of its options, he said. If it releases the

Africans free student —ask ransom for 3

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — African guerrillas Sunday released unharmed an American student they kidnapped a week ago and sent with her a $1-million ransom demand for the freedom of three other persons, government officials said.

Barbara A. Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., walked into the western Tanzanian town of Kigoma after being released several miles away in the bush, not far from the remote wildlife research center where she had been studying.

She was flown to Dar Es Salaam and taken to the U.S. Embassy for a debriefing by Ambassador W. Beverly Carter. Tanzanian officials said she apparently did not know the whereabouts of the three seized with her.

ACCORDING TO government sources, she carried a letter from her kidnappers demanding a ransom of around $1 million for the release of the other three captives.

The sources said the guerrillas also demanded the release of an unknown number of political prisoners in neighboring Zaire and urged that any search for the kidnap victims in that country be called off immediately.

Miss Smuts, appearing tired but otherwise in good health, refused to answer newsmen's questions about her captivity.

Miss Smuts, Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif., Kenneth S. Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif.—all Stanford University students—and Emilie Bergman, a Dutch national, were abducted last Monday by some 40 heavily armed men from an animal research center 14 miles from Kigoma.

Tanzanian officials said the 40 kidnapers, who arrived and left by boat on Lake Tanganyika, probably belonged to the Peoples' Revolution Party in neighboring Zaire.

The Marxist guerrillas have been fighting the government of Zaire for several years and officials said they might have staged the kidnapping to draw attention to their movement.

Jane Goodall, the British director of the animal research center where the kidnap occurred, was meeting with Ambassador Carter when news of the release came.

"This is the best news I have ever received in my life," said Dr. Goodall, jumping up and down. "It is like having a 10-ton weight lifted from my shoulders."

Doctors to escalate slowdown

Associated Press

Despite a hastily passed compromise law on malpractice insurance, California anesthesiologists say another escalation of their work slowdown will come Tuesday.

After the Memorial Day holiday, the protest was to spread southward from the Los Angeles area and affect hospitals in San Diego County — all 35 of them by the end of the week, the physicians said.

Anesthesiologists at Riverside County's Hemet Valley Hospital were also expected to join the boycott Tuesday.

By the end of the week, anesthesiologists will be withholding all but emergency services in more than 100 of the 240 private hospitals in Southern California.

The interim bill passed last week by the Legislature, which is holding a special session on the malpractice crisis, is designed to provide insurance coverage at a low rate for the present time. There will be a balloon payment at the end of the year.

Coverage for the remainder of the year will cost doctors $1,000 to $2,000 rather than the $9,000 that would have been charged without the new law.

Dr. Donald Dose, president-elect of the California Anesthesiologists Society, said the law was inadequate and would not mollify protesting doctors.

"The same problems will exist at the end of the year unless fundamental changes are made," Dose said. "Eventually all the money will have to be repaid to the insurance companies anyhow."

In Southern California, anesthesiologists in the Long Beach and San Gabriel Valley areas led the work slowdown, refusing to administer anesthetics except in emergency, cancer-related and obstetric cases. Since its beginning last Monday, the walkout has spread to other counties and has started to affect hospitals in the central Los Angeles area.

N.Y. doctors hit malpractice plan

Combined News Services

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y. — New York State doctors voted Sunday not to support a new state malpractice insurance law, and some doctors said the action could result in a phaseout of all but emergency services on July 1. At a stormy meeting of its House of Delegates, the state medical society also voted to set up its own doctor-supported insurance company to try to cope with rising malpractice insurance premiums. "The new state law is insufficient to give us proper protection, to make us insurable," said Anita DeLaGarza, a spokesman for the Queens County Ad Hoc Malpractice Committee. The state entered the malpractice fray after the Argonaut Insurance Co., which had insured nearly all New York doctors, said it would have to raise premiums by about 200 per cent or drop its coverage. The new law, passed last week, sets up a Joint Underwriters Association, a pool of about 300 companies which would take over most malpractice insurance coverage on July 1. According to the medical society, rates would go up about 100 per cent under the plan. A society spokesman said the doctors hope to hold premium increases to less than 15 per cent with their own Medical Liability Mutual Insurance Co.

Alaska earthquake

PALMER, Alaska — An earthquake with a magnitude of 5.7 on the Richter scale occurred beneath the Gulf of Alaska Sunday, the Palmer Observatory reported. Palmer officials said the quake was not felt in Kodiak, the nearest populated area to the quake. The epicenter was about 150 miles southeast of Kodiak, officials said, and a tidal wave warning wasn't issued. The Alaska earthquake of 1964 registered 8.5 on the scale and the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.3. A reading of 7 is a major quake capable of widespread and heavy damage.

Big Powers 'inattentive'

MEDFORD, Mass. — Newly developing nations are justified in complaining that the U.S. and Soviet Union have not paid them enough attention, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, U.S. ambassador-designate to the United Nations, said Sunday. Speaking at class day exercises at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University, Moynihan said the U.S. has been so preoccupied with its relations with Russia and other major powers in the past 25 years that "there hasn't been enough time left over, enough energy left over for new nations with new concerns that warrant our attention." Moynihan, a former ambassador to India, said he thinks his appointment to the United Nations may bring greater attention to the so-called Third World nations.

Budget trouble

NEW YORK — State Sen. Roy Goodman said Sunday that New York City will have to default on $1 billion worth of its obligations June 11 unless Mayor Abraham Beame makes credible cuts in his proposed $12.8 billion budget. Goodman, a Republican-Liberal, said he was disclosing the magnitude of the city's financial problem for the first time and added that a total of $3 billion must be found within the next 90 days. In a personal appeal to the mayor, Goodman said: "The plain fact is that the city administration's credibility is now regarded by the financial community as 'zero-minus' and will continue to be unless we make a believable further budget cut." He said soundings in Washington, Albany and in the city's financial community convinced him a credible cut would be in the neighborhood of $300 million. Admitting the difficulty of making cuts in such fields as education and welfare, Goodman said: "The question is no longer what cuts can be made; the question is whether the city can survive if the cuts are not made."

Soviet business exec executed for bribery

MOSCOW — A firing squad has executed a high Russian business official convicted of taking bribes from a foreigner, Soviet sources said Sunday. The sources said the widow of Yuri S. Sosnovsky was informed about the execution after it had taken place. Sosnovsky, former director of a furniture manufacturing concern, was convicted of receiving $152,000 worth of rubles in bribes as well as a tape recorder, radio, watches and overcoats from Swiss businessman Walter Haeflin. Haeflin received 10 years in prison, but the sources said he would likely be freed under an amnesty before the end of this year in return for giving full evidence on the case. Sources said Haeflin testified the large bribes had been demanded by Sosnovsky as a condition for buying the Swiss machinery. Death by firing squad is the standard penalty for high economic crimes.

Show of force

MADRID — Gen. Francisco Franco reviewed Spain's military and police might Sunday to mark the 36th anniversary of Franco's victory in the Spanish Civil War. The 82-year-old chief of state, slouched and returning salutes slowly, stood for 90 minutes as 11,000 members of the armed forces and police passed by in the annual victory parade in Madrid. American and French-built jet fighter-bombers thundered overhead in a salute to the commander-in-chief, increasingly reported by political circles as preparing to step down. Beside Franco, as in the past six years, was Juan Carlos de Borbon, the 37-year-old prince named by Franco to succeed him as chief of state and Spain's first king since 1931.

Medical problem

LONDON — Doctors who qualified to practice medicine in India have lost the automatic right they held for 83 years to practice in this country. The change, introduced last Wednesday by the General Medical Council, followed mounting disquiet over the standards of some overseas doctors practicing in Britain. It is certain to have an adverse effect on the National Health Service, where 10,000 of the 60,000 doctors employed are Indian. The new eligibility requirement means that Indian doctors will have to pass the same tests nearly all foreign medical graduates have to take to work here. The requirement does not apply to Indian doctors already practicing in Britain. Indian qualifications were first recognized in 1892, when the subcontinent was the biggest possession in the British Empire.

Soviet cosmonauts dock with orbiting lab

Combined News Services

Two Soviet cosmonauts successfully corrected their course and docked their Soyuz 18 spacecraft with the orbiting Salyut 4 space station Sunday, Moscow radio reported.

The report said that they found all systems in the space lab working normally.

Salyut 4 has been drifting through space under automatic guidance since Feb. 9 when two other cosmonauts left it after spending 28 days aboard in a Soviet space endurance record. The radio did not say how long the present mission will last.

Cosmonauts Lt. Col. Pyotr Klimuk, 33, the craft's commander, and Vitaly Sevastiyarov, 40, were reported feeling fine.

Soyuz 18 blasted off Saturday and Soviet space officials said it would work with the orbiting laboratory for a series of experiments.

The mission took most Western experts by surprise. They had previously believed the Salyut orbiting lab would be discarded in space as happened to its three predecessors.

The Soyuz 18 flight came only seven weeks before the scheduled orbital rendezvous of a similar Soyuz craft and a three-man American Apollo ship.

Pressure

A former official of Baltimore County said in a newspaper interview published Sunday that Spiro T. Agnew, while he was Baltimore County executive, pressured him to deposit government funds in a bank in which Agnew held a financial interest.

The official, former County Finance Director Norman W. Wood, was quoted in the interview in the Baltimore Sun as saying that the pressure came both from Agnew and from J. Walter Jones, a close business and personal associate of Agnew.

The report was denied by Jones, who founded the bank in question in 1963. Jones said he did not pressure anyone, adding, "The opposite was true so there would be no embarrassment to Mr. Agnew."

In the interview, Wood said Agnew repeatedly pressured him to deposit public funds in the Chesapeake National Bank shortly after it opened in January 1964. "I resisted it and resisted it until Agnew called me into his office and ordered me," Wood said.

Politician

John D. Rockefeller IV, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor in 1972, has resigned as president of West Virginia Wesleyan College to resume his political career.

"Mr. Rockefeller told us he is considering running for governor in 1976 and wants some time to travel around the state and quietly assess that possibility," H. A. Latimer, chairman of the school's board of trustees, said Sunday in Buckhannon, W. Va.

A Democratic maverick in New York's Republican Rockefeller family, he was named president of the college in 1973, after he was defeated in the 1972 gubernatorial race by incumbent Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr.

No higher

Junko Tabei, the 35-year-old Japanese who became the first woman to climb Mt. Everest, said her first thought upon reaching the top of the world's highest peak was, "Thank goodness, I don't have to go any higher."

The Japanese newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun, in a dispatch Sunday from the base camp of the all-women Everest expedition, said Mrs. Tabei described the summit as "so cramped I could hardly put my two feet together to stand on it."

Mrs. Tabei and her Sherpa guide, Ang Tsering, sealed the peak May 16. The expedition is expected to reach Katmandu, Nepal, about May 28.

Banker

Jacob Leichtman, a Polish immigrant who started making small loans in a Brooklyn ice cream parlor in 1924 and built the business into the $500 million Commercial Bank of North America, has died at age 79.

Leichtman retired six years ago and Commercial became the National Bank of North America.

He liked to tell of how he got his start by cosigning a note for a friend in the Russian-Polish section of New York. Against the advice of friends, he became convinced that extending credit to small-wage earners and shopkeepers would be the road to financial success.

In later years, Leichtman served as chairman of Israel Bonds, trustee of Beth Israel Hospital, treasurer of the American Jewish Congress and head of the banking division of the United Jewish Appeal.

JFK link

Time magazine reported Sunday it has been told "by credible sources" that then-President John F. Kennedy and his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, in 1961 "covertly ordered agencies of the U.S. government to find sure means of deposing Fidel Castro, Cuba's chief of state."

The magazine said, "Whether or not assassination attempts against Castro were authorized by the Kennedys is still unclear. But they did send word to the CIA, at least, that he must be knocked out of power by any means the agency could devise." The magazine said the sources said this occurred after the Bay of Pigs disaster ended an attempt by CIA-backed anti-Castroites to invade Cuba.

The magazine said the State Department "and possibly the FBI and the Pentagon were told that ways should be found to get rid of Castro."

White lawmaker has quandary for blacks

An application by Rep. Fortney H. "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., to join the congressional Black Caucus has thrown its 17 members into a quandary. The problem is that Stark is white.

The California Democrat applied for caucus membership several weeks ago in a letter to Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., the chairman of the exclusively black group. The application, made with out fanfare because Stark said he was sincere and not just seeking publicity, has yet to be acted upon.

A spokesman for the Black Caucus says it is still under discussion and a decision will be made after Congress returns from its Memorial Day recess. "We'll have to do something about it," he said.

While most members of the Black Caucus appear to be leaning toward rejecting Stark's request, they fear such a vote would open the group to charges of discrimination.

So far, only one member, Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., has spoken in favor of Stark. "I'm going to vote for you, brother," he told Stark.

Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., also appears to be sympathetic. Dellums, whose district abuts Stark's district across the bay from San Francisco, notes that Stark's constituency is some 30 per cent black or Spanish-speaking.

Members of the Black Caucus nonetheless fear that if Stark is accepted, other white congressmen with large black constituencies — even conservative southerners with little sympathy for their objectives — might also seek membership. Stark, however, is generally considered "a friend" by the blacks.

"Urban poverty, whether you are black, brown or white, is repressive," Stark wrote in his letter of application. "Poor people, regardless of their color, are effectively denied representation in our system of government."

Hot car

We recently purchased a 1975 automobile and have been told by our friends that we're driving a potential fire bomb because of the catalytic converter. We are planning a trip to Yosemite in June and these same well-meaning friends tell us that the National Park Service is going to ban all new cars from wilderness areas because of the fire hazard. Is there any truth to these allegations? D.M., Long Beach.

The rumors were started in March by a report from the California Division of Forestry that catalytic converters were responsible for six grass fires, but the information later turned out to be erroneous. Catalytic converters do generate more surface heat than conventional mufflers and the California Air Resources Board is studying this situation, but there currently is no conclusive evidence that the devices pose a significantly greater fire hazard. A spokesman for the National Park Service said there are no plans at this time to ban new cars from any wilderness campground. The six brush fires reported by state forestry officials were ignited by automobiles, but none of the cars had converters. Since all vehicles are capable of starting forest fires, a motorist should avoid parking in tall grass if his car has been running for a long time and he should never let his car idle in a brushy area.

No sale

Can I sell homemade crafts in much the same manner as a yard or garage sale? If so, must I collect and report sales tax on items I sell? Mrs. K.K., Long Beach.

In Long Beach, you are allowed to have garage sales of used household items but you aren't permitted to sell new merchandise, which would include arts and crafts items at your home. This would place your enterprise in the category of a retail business, which is prohibited in a residential zone. City regulations allow only one garage sale a year, not to exceed seven consecutive days, and no permit or license is needed, according to Joyce Elza of the city business license office. Under state law, an individual holding more than two sales of any merchandise, new or used, in a 12-month period, must report the sales and pay taxes on them to the California Board of Equalization, said a spokeswoman for the board. Both of these laws, however, are difficult to apply and are rarely enforced to the letter.

Labor boss

Was George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO over in the service? How can he call himself president of the labor unions when he isn't elected? R.P., Long Beach.

The 80-year-old labor leader never served in the military. The son of a Bronx plumber who had been head of his union local, Meany quit school at 16 and became an apprentice plumber to support his widowed mother and seven younger brothers and sisters. He worked his way up through local and state labor organizations and solidified his power base in 1939 when he became secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor. At the 1947 AFL convention, he tangled with his first major foe, John L. Lewis, powerful head of the miner's union, over Meany's support of the miner's union, over Meany's support of the government's Cold War requirement that unions submit anti-communist loyalty oaths. After a stormy session, the delegates sided with Meany and his future accession to the AFL's presidency was assured. He took over the top post in 1952 after the death of AFL president William Green, and since then union members have elected him by acclamation without a formal ballot because no one has successfully launched a campaign to challenge him. A master power broker, Meany engineered the bitterly fought AFL-CIO merger of 1955 and survived his long-term battles with the Teamsters' James Hoffa and the fiery social crusader, the late Walter Reuther, who led his United Auto Workers out of the AFL-CIO in 1967. Unlike Reuther or Lewis, Meany is considered a reformer. He has always worked within the existing labor power structure and is not known as an aggressive organizer of nonunion workers. His critics charge that Meany, who earns $90,000 a year, has become too conservative and out of touch with the labor force, but his supporters point out that he has outlasted critics who were calling him a has-been two decades ago.

Bills, bills bills

I received a county tax bill for $187 on my boat last year and a few weeks later, I received another bill for $299 on the same boat. In August, I mailed a check for $187 to the Los Angeles County tax collector's office. In September, I received another bill for $317, and when I called the tax collector's office, I was told this bill was a mistake and I should ignore it. In November, I received a refund check for $187 - the amount I had paid - from the tax collector's office. In December, I received a notice of delinquent taxes in the amount of $320. At this point, I gave up and contacted Action Line. You learned that my boat had been listed under two different file numbers, which caused the mix-up. I was told to pay $323, the correct tax bill for my boat, and I did this in February. I thought the matter was finally settled, but I have now been notified that the county has placed a lien on my boat for a $317 delinquent tax bill. Can Action Line try once more to straighten out this mess? R.S., Redondo Beach.

The county has withdrawn the lien on your property. When you paid your tax bill in February, your account was supposed to be cleared, but the county's computer system still registered the one bill you were sent in September for $317. Your tax records were again placed in the delinquent file and the lien certificate was automatically issued. After we contacted the tax collector's office, the mistake was discovered and your account records finally corrected.

Bikeways

I'm 10 years old and have just moved to Westminster near the corner of Bolsa Chica Road and Duncannon Avenue. All my friends live in Garden Grove and I can't get over there because of the freeway overpass. Are there plans for a bike trail on Bolsa Chica? I go to school in Los Alamitos and if there were trails I could ride to school. A.F., Westminster.

There are no plans at the present time to put a bike trail along that road and over the two bridges spanning the San Diego and Garden Grove freeways, that merge nearby. Westminster hasn't been active in establishing bike trails, as have many other Orange County cities, and the countywide arterial bikeway system plans do not call for trails near enough to help you, according to Bob Rusby, trail coordinator for the Orange County Planning Department. He has mailed you maps showing the existing trails in the county and those proposed in the arterial bikeway master plan.

Boy loses in Russian roulette

Jessie Shank, 14, of View Park, lost a game of Russian roulette Sunday when he put a .38-caliber pistol to his head and pulled the trigger firing a bullet into his head, Los Angeles police said.

He was listed in guarded condition at Daniel Freeman Hospital in Inglewood late Sunday after brain surgery.

Police said the youth, of 307 Montana Ave., was playing with several guns at the home of Bruce Vernoff, 4123 Cloverdale Ave., while the friend's parents were in Las Vegas for the weekend. Vernoff's sister and a neighbor girl identified as Nina Garza also were present.

Officers said Shank told his friends: "Six to one are pretty good odds." They said the bullet went through his head and narrowly missed the two girls.

Inmate hangs self in L.A. hospital ward

A 28-year-old escapee from Detroit awaiting trial for felonious assault hung himself in the hospital ward of the Los Angeles County Jail Sunday, sheriff's deputies said.

His name was withheld until notification of relatives.

Officials said he apparently shredded his blanket and hung himself from a top bunk. He was found at 1:10 p.m. during a routine check of the cell and was pronounced dead at the scene.

He was in the hospital section because he was being treated for an unknown illness.

After he was arrested earlier this month, a records check revealed he was an escapee.

TRAFFIC

Highway patrolmen said Charles C. Smith of Sun Valley, a flagman, was standing on a mound behind the wall when the car struck.

Driver Carl Frank Lux, 31, of Van Nuys, said his accelerator stuck on a straightaway and he entered the curve at up to 80 miles per hour. Lux was treated for whiplash injuries.

Sunday afternoon a 3-year-old Pacoima boy died after he was struck by a car as he ran into the street in front of his home.

Police said Joe Moore, 13063 Cochran St., darted out from between parked cars as his horrified father yelled to warn him of the approaching car. The driver was not cited or held.

IN ANOTHER accident, a Baldwin Park woman died when she was struck by a car as she crossed Baldwin Park Boulevard in front of her home.

Officers said 51-year-old Alice Walton died at the scene, near the intersection with Foster Avenue. The driver, a 23-year-old Covina woman, was not cited or held.

In other parts of the nation, sunny weather lured millions onto the nation's highways for the weekend, and fuel conservation took a holiday.

"You'd never know there was anything like an energy crisis," said a dispatcher at the Virginia Beach, Va., police department. Police said there were many more cars in the beach community this year than last, and the town, a major East Coast resort, was packed with tourists.

Mansfield says U.S. would have to defend S. Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield believes that if the North Korea attacks South Korea the United States — because of its treaty commitments and the presence of its troops — will have no choice but to intervene and become involved in a new Asian war.

Mansfield, in a television interview, acknowledged that the prospect worries him.

He said he hopes the United States will make arrangements to reduce or remove the 40,000 American troops in South Korea over a period of time "so that we would not be bound through the use of approximately two divisions stationed in Korea to the future of that country."

Mansfield was interviewed by Paul Duke, national correspondent for the National Public Affairs Center for Television. A transcript of Mansfield's remarks was made available on Sunday in advance of the broadcasting of the interview at 4:30 p.m. today.

Duke asked Mansfield if U.S. troops should be employed to defend South Korea in case of a new North Korean attack. Mansfield replied:

"There'd be no choice because they're right on the 38th parallel ... we'd be back in another war on the mainland of Asia. "We do have a treaty; we would honor that treaty. We have no choice."

Mansfield indicated he agreed with a proposal by a newspaper commentator that the Soviet Union, Communist China, Japan and the United States might guarantee the integrity of South and North Korea.

Mansfield made these other points:

— The South East Asia Treaty Organization, which originally grouped the United States, France, Pakistan, Thailand and the Philippines "is nothing but a paper pact" and should be abolished.

— America's first line of defense in Asia should not be the mainland, but "the island chain off the Asia mainland." Presumably he meant Japan, but he did not so specify.

— President Ford violated the spirit of the 1973 War Powers Act by not adequately consulting Congress during the Mayaguez incident.

— President Ford is doing a good job as chief executive and his handling of the Mayaguez affair "increased his standing considerably."

Earlier Sunday, in a speech at the Georgetown University law school commencement, Mansfield urged the United States Sunday to reject a temptation to retreat into isolationism in the post-Vietnam era.

He said U.S. foreign policy should instead be aimed at assuring world stability through the mutual efforts of nations — including Communist nations — rather than by American military power.

Mansfield said it should be possible to pull out militarily from the entire Southeast Asian mainland — including Thailand — without severing normal international contact or abandoning vital interests in that area.

McGovern supports Palestinians' cause

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern said Sunday the United States should spell out its willingness to recognize that Palestinians have some political rights of their own.

But McGovern said he never proposed that this country officially recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization or any other group as the official spokesmen for Palestinian Arabs.

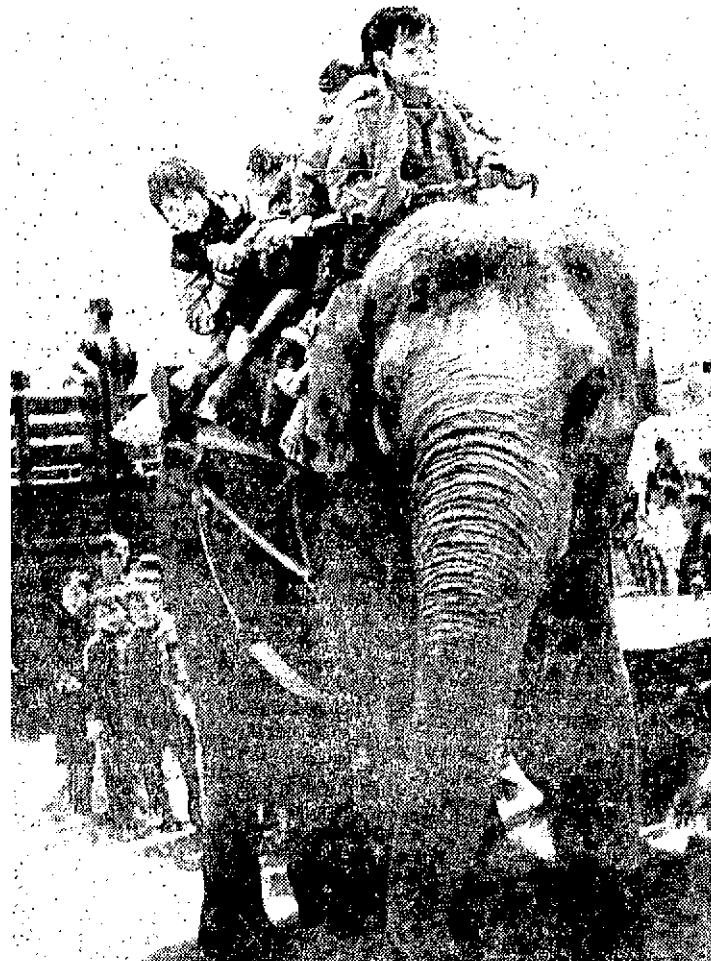

"I have said if the PLO is designated by the Arab world and the Palestinians as their representative at the forthcoming Geneva Conference, we ought to sit in the same room and talk with them as the legitimate representatives for the Palestinians," McGovern said in a radio interview on UPI-Audio's Washington Window.

"That's vastly different than to say we're now deciding that the PLO should be the head of a future Palestinian state if such a state comes into being," McGovern said. "That's vastly different than to say what the solution ought to be to the Palestinian grievance."

"Maybe it ought to be a separate state on the West Bank (of the Jordan), maybe it ought to be a federation with Jordan," he said. "But I would prefer that the judgment be made in a plebiscite among the Palestinians — those who live on the West Bank and those who indicate a desire to return."

McGovern, who visited the Middle East earlier this year, said he did not believe Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has gone far enough in assuring the Palestinians that their interests will be taken into account by the United States.

"There hasn't been any indication on our part that we're prepared to accept an independent Palestinian state or even that we're interested in a plebiscite among the Palestinians," he said. "We've left our policies there so vague that no one really knows if we recognize a legitimate Palestinian right or not."

Newlywed Reservations for refugees sponsored

By SYLVIA SPENCER

CAMP PENDLETON (AP) — The parishioners of a Catholic church in nearby Oceanside stood up and cheered Sunday when told their pastor had agreed to sponsor two newlywed refugee couples and their families.

"The response was tremendous," said Fr. Martin McKeon. "We already have groups of men out searching for housing and jobs."

Although McKeon, pastor of San Luis Rey Mission, had said Saturday the church would sponsor Nguyen Thi Hung and Phuoc Van Hai, plus their wives and families, the parishioners were told about it at Sunday Mass.

HUNG WED Nguyen Thi Kieu Anhe and Hai married Nguyen Thi Tuyet Oanh in a double ceremony Thursday in "Little Saigon" at Camp Pendleton where nearly 18,000 Southeast Asian refugees are housed.

They and 14 members of their families have been waiting for sponsors and security clearances so that they can leave the camp. Now that they have a sponsor, all that remains is the completion of their security clearances.

Hung is a medical student and his wife is studying law. The other newlyweds are commercial students. Fr. McKeon said, "We want to help them continue what they have been doing. Several doctors came up to me after the service and said they would try to help."

THE PASTOR said the parishioners will try to find houses near each other so that the family members can stay together. Some church members are soliciting furniture from dealers in the parish, said McKeon, "to make these people just as comfortable as we can."

When he told them of the church's offer of sponsorship, McKeon said to the newlyweds, "My parish wants to give you a wedding gift. We want to sponsor all of you."

"We will help you find work. We will help you go to school. This is our wedding present to you."

FT. CHAFFEE, Ark. (UPI) — The civilian coordinator of the largest U.S. refugee camp for Vietnamese says that one of three options being considered by the federal government for handling the refugee situation could lead to "Indian reservations" for lower-class, unskilled Vietnamese.

The coordinator, Donald MacDonald, 56, who retired from the State Department last year, said one of the options under consideration, which he called the "least desirable," was to send unskilled refugees to a single encampment.

"We think this risky — a path possibly to an Indian reservation of indefinite term. We haven't done well with real or simulated Indian reservations in the past," said MacDonald.

MacDonald made his observations in a memorandum circulated among officials at Ft. Chaffee and Washington. He said non-government volunteer agencies should be responsible for relocating Vietnamese refugees.

A State Department official denied that the government was considering putting refugees in "Indian-type reservations."

"Denied, denied, officially denied," said Eleanor Green, public affairs officer for the State Department refugee task force. "This report is totally incorrect." She said no specific areas are being set aside to place refugees in any discriminatory way. She said resettling will be determined by the availability of sponsors and jobs.

MacDonald said he circulated his memorandum among volunteer agency heads at Ft. Chaffee for their comments. He said he sent a telegram to the State Department expressing similar beliefs.

Some decision needs to be made on whether to handle the lower class, non-English speaking refugees that are beginning to arrive at the Arkansas camp in the same manner as the English-speaking upper and middle class

Opposition told to sending troops

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A poll of Californians reveals strong opposition to sending U.S. armed forces if fighting breaks out in the Middle East, Korea or Thailand.

According to the Mervin Field Poll published Sunday, the majority of respondents—almost 80 per cent—think the United States should not send troops to defend Israel against Arab states even if Israel's survival is at stake.

Likewise, the survey found 6 out of 10 persons opposing the use of U.S. troops to aid South Korea if it were attacked by North Korea. Nearly 80 per cent rejected the idea of using U.S. forces stationed in Thailand to resist the takeover of the government by insurgents.

In general, the respondents felt the best course of action in Korea or Thailand would be a quick withdrawal of troops or, at most, to defend only U.S. bases in those countries.

Californians did line up on Israel's side by a 45 to 7 per cent margin when asked to say where their sympathies are. But only 15 per cent would support sending U.S. troops to back Israel, and 62 per cent thought the United States should stay neutral if war breaks out in the Middle East.

The poll represented interviews with 1,053 adults May 5 to 14. This was shortly after the fall of South Vietnam to the Communists and coincided with the seizure of the American freighter Mayaguez by Cambodia.

Governor of Ariz. balks on refugees

PHOENIX, Ariz. (NYTS)—Arizona's governor has expressed reservations about the offer of John Wayne, the actor, to help Vietnamese refugees obtain 17,000 acres of land in the state.

Speaking Saturday from Mexico City, where he was attending the annual meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce of Mexico, Gov. Raul Castro cited the state's high unemployment and said, "We're not prepared to handle a large number of Vietnamese refugees."

Former South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky announced in San Diego Friday that Wayne had extended the land proposal. Ky said he planned to accept the proposal and that he wanted to establish an Israeli-style farming kibbutz for several thousand refugees.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Tuesday

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Much as you'd like to guide all of those around you, it's necessary for others to learn from their own experience in this day of little progress. Play it safe now.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): By enforcing your preferences at home or on the job, you might get present compliance but lose future cooperation. Check for hazards; make corrections.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Treat machinery or electrical items with extra care. Older people compound difficulties or recurring doubts. Protect your health; avoid excess. What's done today endures.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Speculative ventures are out of the question. What is normally considered conservative is now somewhat of a high risk. Choose accordingly. Costs may increase.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have more energy and persuasive ability than usual but not enough to give you any fast results. Sidestep conflicts over money. What happens today has lasting results.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Set goals and priorities early. Work alone and away from public view until you're far enough along to compete or face your critics. Later hours are great for firm planning.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Thrift and common sense get you through the day in good order. Disagreement over value generates discussion or strong opinions that shouldn't be taken as permanent.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Hold your temper (your words, too) until you're sure of what's going on. Differences of opinion won't cause quarrels or future trouble provided they're handled right today.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Postpone formal bids, applications or journeys regardless of everyone's eagerness. Expect heavier work because of recent lapses, and increased responsibility.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Money comes into question again, especially if it's up to group management. Keep your own resources intact, interest earning, and stay out of current speculations.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You can't gain by being irritable as you balance private enterprises against external demands. You'll please no one but yourself now, so a direct approach is best in the long run.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Do it yourself courteously whenever you can. Skip travel and official procedures where feasible. Grin and bear it. There's still plenty of work to keep you busy.

Alan Alda says men feel wives deserve equal pay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Actor Alan Alda, star of television's "M-A-S-H," said Sunday the current economic recession has convinced many men that women — particularly their wives — should earn equal wages.

Jill Ruckleshaus, who appeared with Alda on a broadcast interview on ABC's "Issues and Answers," predicted the Equal Rights Amendment will be ratified by 1979 and that President Ford will consider a woman for the next opening on the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Ruckleshaus heads the President's Commission on International Women's Year and Alda serves as a co-chairman on equal rights.

Asked about the effects of the recession on job opportunities for women, Alda noted some men will resent it.

"But you know," he added, "... there are a lot of men who are out of work, who would love to see their wives working full time and getting equal pay with other men who might be working in similar jobs."

"The recession has raised the consciousness of a lot of men around the country who would like to see equal rights for their wives and their wives aren't getting it."

Alda told a story of an employed woman in Chicago who was refused the use of her credit card because her husband had been out of work for three months.

"She had been working full time, earning more money than her husband had been earning when he was working and had never missed a payment on her charge account," he said.

"She was a victim of stereotypical thinking and had credit practices which will be changed when the Equal Rights Amendment is passed."

Mrs. Ruckleshaus said there is "no question" ERA will become a part of the Constitution by 1979, the deadline for ratification by 38 states. Only 34 states have ratified it so far.

Quoting a recent law review article, she said ERA will remedy the current situation in which court rulings on sex discrimination have been "pretty uneven because there is no national standard, constitutional standard, to which judges can repair."

54 per cent in survey for legalized abortions

By LOUIS HARRIS

A 54-38 per cent majority of Americans favor legalized abortions for women who are not more than three months pregnant.

These latest results represent the greatest public support for abortion ever recorded by the Harris Survey and a marked change of public opinion since 1972, when a 46-42 per cent opposed abortion of a three-month-old fetus.

THESE results are also surprising because of the present controversy surrounding "late" abortions of women who are three to six months pregnant. Although the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in favor of abortions up to three months of a woman's pregnancy, it allows individual states to determine the legality of abortions beyond that point.

Although most Americans agree with the Supreme Court ruling, a substantial, 68-20 per cent majority still opposes legalizing "late" abortion.

The main arguments in behalf of legalized abortions up to three months of pregnancy are:

—A 73-19 per cent majority feels that "unless abortions are legalized, many women will die from having illegal and badly done abortions."

—A 65-27 per cent majority believes that "as long as a doctor has been consulted, the matter of an abortion is only a question of a woman's decision with her doctor's professional advice."

—The three-month limit stipulated by Americans is based upon a 62-15 per cent majority view that "medically, up to three months of pregnancy, the dangers of an abortion are very slight."

Backing for legalized abortions is predominately provided by easterners and westerners, people under 30, Protestants and Jews and those with some college education, while the main opposition comes from Southerners, those 50 and older and people whose education did not go beyond grade school. Oddly enough, more men than women favor abortions, and a 58-45 per cent plurality of Catholics support abortions.

STILL, public support of legalized abortion greatly diminishes when it concerns women who have passed the first three months of pregnancy. The cross section was asked:

"The greatest controversy over abortions now centers on the second 'trimester' — the second three months of pregnancy. In many states, abortions are legal between three and six months pregnancy, on the grounds that all such abortions must take place in a hospital, with the mother's consent and her doctor's close supervision. However, opponents argue that such later abortions are likely to give birth to a live baby who might otherwise live, so such an abortion is no different from legalized murder."

Thus, although Americans are willing to accept early abortion, they adhere to a traditional, antiabortion stance for a fetus in later development.

Health Questions and Answers

SEVERE LOW BACK PAIN FROM BENDING HEAD OVER

Q. Doctor, I really have neck and back pain when I bend my head over to work on something or bend it forward to read or put on my shoe. Then, I really have sharp pains in my low back. Occasionally it bothers me in other places but not as much as my low back. I don't do anything about it because all doctors want to do is give me pills, stretch it or put heat on it. That has never helped me and I'm getting worse — Do you have any new suggestions?

Dr. Lowell Ward, D.C.
A: I have an idea that you have been involved in an auto accident or have injured your neck severely in another way. It sounds like you have some torn ligaments in the top of your neck underneath the base of the skull. When muscles and ligaments are torn in this area, bending your head forward allows the top vertebra, the atlas, to move too freely. Therefore, when you bend your head over an abnormal stress is exerted on the spinal cord irritating nerves in the area of this vertebra that effect lower back areas.

Q. Do you think that this is a serious problem?

A. Yes, it is serious and one that certainly requires immediate Precision Chiropractic attention and care. Usually, a mal-position of the atlas vertebra prevents the muscles and ligaments from healing as well as the continual bending your head forward. This sets up a dangerous condition in your neck and makes it terribly vulnerable to additional serious injuries should you be involved in another accident or neck injury. It just is not worth taking a chance on not having it properly treated. You might not be as lucky with pain, etc. the next time.

Q. What kind of treatment will help me and not hurt me more?

A: I recommend Precision Chiropractic Methods, because effective treatment can be given to correct the problem without use of heavy force or traction. In fact, you will hardly feel the vertebral adjustment.

Birthrate hits record low, but population up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The birth and fertility rates of American women dipped to record lows in 1974, the Census Bureau said Sunday.

However, the figures do not suggest the United States is nearing "zero population growth." In fact, because more women are reaching child-bearing age, the nation's population is expected to grow at least for the next few decades.

In its annual population estimate, the Census Bureau put the 1974 birthrate — numbers of births per 1,000 persons — at 14.9, the same as in 1973.

THAT continues the birth rate at the lowest level ever. It combines with a lower fertility rate to further slow population growth. The record birth rate was set in 1947 when families were reunited after World War II.

A better indicator of population trends is the total fertility rate — the number of children the average woman will have in her lifetime based on current births among women of child-bearing age.

In 1974, this figure fell to 1,862 births over the lifetime of 1,000 women, a record low and far under 1957's all-time high of 3,760.

The current fertility rate is also well under the 2,100 "replacement level." That is the average number of births required over a period of 70 years to hold the U.S. population constant.

Demographers point to the increasing use of birth control, decline in popularity of teen-age marriages and desire for smaller families as reasons behind these declines.

On the surface, the trend would seem to point to a drop in population. But because of differences in the nation's age structure and a relatively constant death rate, the number of Americans will grow sharply in the years ahead.

One reason is that the "baby boom" of the 1950s is becoming "a young adult boom," with obvious implications for the birth rate. For example, in 1961, females in the key child-bearing ages of 18 to 34 made up 10.8 per cent of the total population. In 1974, the proportion was up to 13.4 per cent.

Census experts estimate that, if couples decided to have children at the 2.1-per-family replacement level, the U.S. population in the year 2025 would be almost 300 million — about 30 per cent higher than it is now.

In 1974, the number of births fell to 3.2 million, one of the lowest figures since 1945. But deaths last year were only about 1.9 million and net civilian immigration was about 360,000.

This meant that, despite the falling birth rate, the population still grew by 1.59 million persons, or 7.5 per cent.

In order to achieve immediate zero population growth, stabilizing the United States at 212 million persons, it would be necessary to cut the birth rate in half.

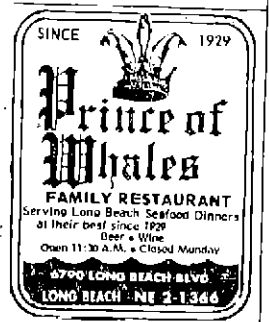

Rescue plane moves babies

STANFORD (UPI)—A Coast Guard search and rescue craft with an incubator aboard airlifted two newly-born infants 200 miles to Stanford Medical Center Sunday for treatment of respiratory problems.

The infants were moved from King City's George Mee Memorial Hospital in central Monterey County by a C130 to Moffett Field, near Stanford.

A spokesman said the infants needed more complex facilities than could be provided by the King

City hospital. The babies were reported in good condition. Their names were withheld.

Family of 29 treated for cancer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Twenty-nine members of one family are being treated at Ohio State University Clinical Research Center. They all are victims or potential victims of an inherited cancer.

Five other families are under study in relation to the same cancer, but a center spokesman said the incidence is most widespread among the Wampler family.

Dr. Jack George, director of the center, explained what the center is wrestling with in this type of thyroid cancer and what he has to work with.

IF EITHER parent has the cancer type, 50 per cent of the children are likely to develop it, he said. The body's excessive production of the common hormone calcitonin is a sign of the cancer.

When an excess shows up in members of susceptible families, the recommended treatment is surgical removal of the entire thyroid gland, George explained.

"We now have a very sensitive test to pick this up by measuring hormones in the blood," he said.

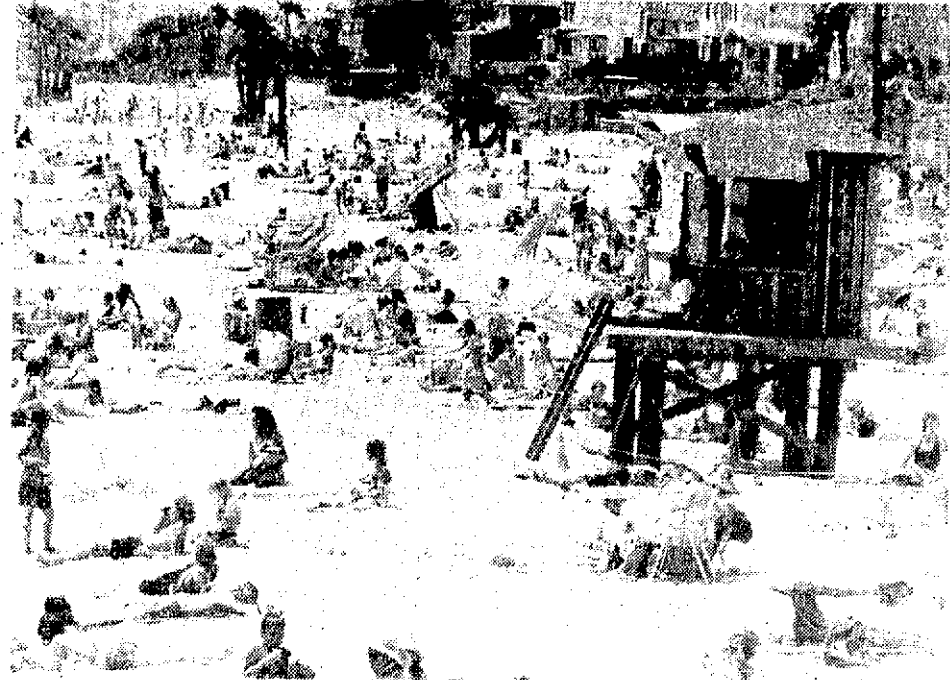

Mrs. Doris Wampler's immediate family represents various stages of the treatment.

Her 39-year-old husband, Gene, had neck surgery for the cancer more than two years ago. In March, 1974, he had a liver tumor removed.

TWICE A week, he goes to the OSU center for injections of transfer factor, the immunization researchers are studying as an aid to cancer victims whose own defense mechanisms have faltered.

Two of the Wampler's sons, Darrell, 18, and Day Dale, 12, have had their thyroid glands removed and take regular replacement dosages of thyroid and Vitamin D.

The third son, Wayne, 15, has the regular six-month blood tests for any change in the hormone levels.

18 L.B. swimmers rescued

Half million lured to beaches

Beaches in Los Angeles and Orange counties were jammed Sunday, as sunny weather and the holiday weekend drew more than half a million Southland residents to the seashore.

No drownings were reported, but Long Beach lifeguards were kept busy watching 85,000 beachgoers and rescuing 18 swimmers.

Most of the rescued bathers swam too far from shore and became overtired, lifeguards said, but some suffered cramps in the chilly 60-degree water.

Marine safety officers answered 30 calls for assistance to boaters, and resuscitated a woman jogger who collapsed while running on the beach.

The unidentified woman refused to be sent to a hospital, and was taken home by relatives, lifeguards said.

said.

Though air temperatures at most beaches stayed in the 60s, Seal Beach lifeguards said temperatures up to 78 lured 12,000 sunbathers to their one-mile strand.

Another 100,000 persons and 40 surf rescues kept Huntington Beach lifeguards busy, and Los Angeles County lifeguards said 150,000 persons visited South Bay beaches.

In Playa del Rey a large sailboat hit a sewer pipe and was stuck for more than an hour before lifeguards could free it.

No one was injured in the accident, lifeguards said.

Santa Monica lifeguards said 150,000 beachgoers crowded onto that city's shoreline, and another 150,000 sunbathers were estimated for Malibu area beaches.

BANNED CANCER DRUG

Andrew R. L. McNaughton of the McNaughton Foundation of Sausalito, a laetrile "research center," was described in the report as "among those involved in some way with the illegal traffic in laetrile."

Identified as "promoters" of the unlawful use of laetrile were Dr. Ernest Krebs Jr., San Francisco biochemist who with his father worked on the development of laetrile between 1920 and 1950, and Dr. John A. Richardson, a physician of Albany, Calif., who has been arrested three times for trafficking in laetrile but never convicted.

Also implicated among the so-called higher-ups of the conspiracy, according to Hoffman and other government informants, is Dr. Ernesto Rodriguez Contreras, who has treated thousands of Americans and Canadians with laetrile at his Tijuana cancer clinic.

Several of those named as ringleaders of the international smuggling operation were said in the customs report to have "known connections" with convicted laetrile smugglers, as well as close associations with those operating the Tijuana and Munich manufacturing plants.

The drugs are known to be manufactured by Cyto-Pharma de Mexico, S.A., in Tijuana, and by Sikdus Pharmaceuticals in Munich, and are being smuggled into the U.S. and distributed by numerous individuals "associated with the promoters or manufacturers of laetrile, or both," the customs report stated.

A major portion of the illicit drug reaching the smuggling ring's Southern California distribution centers was said to be produced by Cyto-Pharma, which operates both a laboratory and an associated distribution concern, Empresa Del Rio, S.A., on the outskirts of Tijuana close by Contreras' Clinica Del Mar.

Several Cyto-Pharma employees have been arrested by customs agents at San Ysidro while attempting to bring large quantities of laetrile into the U.S.

Variouly known as amygdalin, which is its pharmaceutical name, and as vitamin B-17, Cyto H-3, Kh-3, Krebiozen and Apriken, laetrile is produced in both liquid form for hypodermic injection and in pills called "wobe mugs" by the smugglers.

A 10-cubic-centimeter vial of laetrile — slightly less than a half-ounce sufficient for three daily injections — can be bought for $6 or $7 in Tijuana but sells for as much as $50 to cancer sufferers in the U.S.

A "wobe mugo" pill that costs three cents to manufacture and sells for 25 or 30 cents across the border may cost a patient in the Middle West, the smugglers' richest market, $1.50 or $1.75.

GRANT LEAKE, chief enforcement officer of the California Bureau of Food and Drugs who has been working closely with customs investigators, called the smuggling operation "a multimillion-dollar international racket whose chief conspirators are known to us."

Until the crackdown on the California underground laboratories, including one set up by William Turner and a woman associate, and another in North Hollywood, American-made laetrile was smuggled across the border to Mexican cancer clinics in Tijuana, Ensenada, Tecate and Mexicali.

The Mexican clinics still are doing a thriving business with the laetrile now available from the Tijuana and Munich laboratories, administering it to thousands of American and Canadian cancer victims who cross the border at the rate of 75 to 200 a day to receive injections.

THE largest and most prosperous of these clinics is the Clinica Del Mar run by the Harvard-educated Contreras on the western outskirts of Tijuana, opposite the Plaza Monumental bullring on the oceanfront and handily close by the Cyto-Pharma laetrile manufacturing plant. Contreras is reported to take more than a third of Cyto-Pharma's output, a portion of which finds its way from his clinic into this country, according to customs officials.

Many of those who make the pilgrimage of desperate last hope across the border to be treated with laetrile in the Mexican clinics are shuttled to and from Tijuana in minibuses run by women operators of boarding houses on the American side, principally in the towns of Chula Vista and Imperial Beach, that cater exclusively to cancer patients.

ECONOMIC UPTURN

money supply too rapidly, chances are it would create a new wave of inflation.

"The Fed will not cause a credit crunch," Burns said. He said the money supply and the supply of credit will keep on increasing, with the question being the rate of increase.

The primary cause of inflation, he said, is that "we've been managing our federal finances in such a fashion that, year in and year out, huge deficits are run up." But he added that he thinks both full employment and price stability are possible if the government will practice fiscal discipline.

Ullman, appearing on

CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said he feels "it's going to take all this year and next really to turn this nation around to the proper direction."

"We will go to a higher unemployment rate before it gets better," Ullman said. "Late this year... we should be bottoming out and turning back up. Next year will be a fairly slow year with fairly high unemployment, but remember this isn't an ordinary recession; there are these long-range problems."

He agreed with Burns that the tax rebate has had an important effect on the economy, saying it has started things on the road to gradual recovery.

Ullman predicted that his committee's energy bill incorporating a 3-cent-a-gallon gas tax and a requirement for more efficient autos will win House approval after the Memorial Day recess.

"With three to four days on the floor I'm sure we can hold it together and get it passed basically intact," Ullman said.

He said his bill is better than President Ford's plan because his measure imposes only a 3-cent gasoline tax, with higher taxes only if better fuel economy is not met by 1978. And Detroit can do this, he said.

Ford has imposed a $1-per-barrel import duty on oil and has indicated he may impose a second $1 duty shortly because Congress, in four months, has failed to act on energy legislation. He is also reportedly considering removing controls on the price of some domestic oil. The President had postponed imposition of most of the duty while awaiting congressional moves. A $1-a-barrel levy would raise the cost of a gallon of gas 1 to 1½ cents, it has been estimated.

Burns, asked about the energy problem, said the most important thing needed is for Congress to pass its energy bill, "and the Congress has been very slow in doing that."

Both Burns and Ullman stressed the necessity for improved energy conservation programs, including using car pools.

"The American people are going to have to learn to start traveling together more," Ullman said.

$100 'savings' on new autos seen

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The president of Ford Motor Co. says that if the government will end its "adversary" relationship with the auto industry, U.S. car makers can save consumers $100 on every new car.

The auto industry accounts for 18 per cent of the Gross National Product, according to Lee A. Iacocca, and he said Congress should remember that government and industry share a mutual constituency.

Iacocca repeated that prices will rise an average $150 to $300 at Ford when 1978 models come out this fall. Even so, he predicted the economy will be "fantastic" in 1976 and said auto sales will explode like a rocket on the Fourth of July.

If the auto industry takes off, the economy will soar, he said — or vice versa.

"We're the biggest employer by far, the largest taxpayer and the largest value-added industry — which means we put the labor content in. So look at it all — 20 per cent of the U.S. (economy). I don't want to get into the chicken and the egg, whether we lead the economy or the economy leads us, but let's say we're one big factor."

In a weekend interview, Iacocca also said Ford is going all out to halt the "onslaught" of imports and will build several new small cars — including a minicar — during the next three years.

BATTLE

trol was timed to coincide with the street fighting in Beirut, the Israeli spokesman said: "This whole thing happened accidentally and unintentionally."

The battle was Israel's biggest against a regular Arab army since the brief wars of attrition on the Egyptian and Syrian fronts in the months following the 1973 war. It was the first air strike against a Lebanese army unit within recent memory.

The Israeli spokesman said the incident began as an "almost routine" midnight patrol against suspected guerrilla concentrations in the Aita el-Chaab region three miles north of the border.

The 12-man unit was shot at outside the village, however, and in the exchange of fire the two Israelis were hit, he said. Returning through the area a few hours later, the patrol traded heavy fire with a Lebanese army unit quartered in the village.

The spokesman said artillery and mortar fire pounded the unit's position in the hills nearby as it left the town, and air force jets were called in.

He said a U.N. military observer went along with the second force to tell the Lebanese the Israelis did not intend to attack the army.

A relief force of 200 infantrymen and some armored personnel carriers linked up with the embattled patrol at noon and the last Israelis were back over the border by 4 p.m., the spokesman said.

"The planes were directed only against the sources of fire—the artillery," the spokesman said. The results of the air strike were not known immediately, he said.

In Beirut, the Lebanese military spokesman said the fighting apparently started when Lebanese troops tried to stop the Israelis from evacuating their casualties and "by noon our forces were engaged in full-scale battle."

Father's letter tells of S. Vietnam 'purge'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following dispatch was written by AP Correspondent Peter Arnett, who left South Vietnam this past weekend after spending 25 days under the new Communist regime.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
SAIGON (AP) — The message was poignant, from father to daughter.

"Don't ever come back home. The situation in Quang Tin looks more terrible every day," he wrote in a letter hand-delivered to her in Saigon.

"The committees are killing people after accusing them publicly. Do you remember the young man 'T'? He himself accused his father of crimes against the people in a meeting in the rain, and before leaving he said cruelly, 'You shall die.'"

The letter writer was a merchant whose store had been confiscated. He wrote of a crackdown on other merchants and wealthy landowners in the northern part of the country that has been under Communist control for nearly two months.

SIMILAR reports have come in from other areas. They indicate that the discredited Saigon army and former officials of the old Thieu regime are not the only losers in the Vietnam war. The life-style of the whole merchant and landowner class is being wiped out as the victors begin introducing the kind of communism and socialism common in North Vietnam.

That the new social and economic policies were an expected part of the Communist takeover of Vietnam has not made their appearance any less painful to the losers.

"My sister is a civil engineer at Can Tho and she has been encouraged to continue her work in the delta," said a Saigonese. "But her pay? They will give her 21 kilos (42.6 pounds) of rice and 1,000 piasters a month. She used to earn around 80,000."

NORTH Vietnam has enforced a spartan existence on its people for a generation to keep the war machine going. But a senior official told this reporter when he visited Hanoi in September 1972 that even after a successful completion of the war, "We will not be able to give them the consumer goods they need. No, we must continue to sacrifice to build our industry." It seems unlikely that the North will subsidize the South's spendthrift habits as did the United States.

Wealthier Vietnamese in the South have long enjoyed special privileges, such as buying their sons out of military service. Today there is apparently no escape from the work camps being established in many rural areas.

"As do the others, your brother has to study in the forest," said the father's message to his daughter. "They don't have enough to eat, and they have to cut down tall trees all the day. At night they have to carry rice."

"YOUR brother wouldn't dare wear his eyeglasses because the Viet Cong would consider him a 'well-educated person' and that would be to his disadvantage. Now, I am no longer sad about the death of your eldest brother in the war — because that was lucky for him," the father wrote.

The Communist cadres also are discouraging the use of brightly colored garments and cosmetics, even though this is still not visible in Saigon. Many women in the capital city adopted peasant-like garb in the days immediately following the Communist victory.

Prices of black pajamas tripled on the Saigon market. But within a week the miniskirts and gaudy silken ao dai dresses were decorating the city streets. However, in Quang Tin, "nobody would dare to be well dressed anymore," said the father's letter.

"ONLY BLACK and brown shirts are permitted, and Binh-Tri-Thien shoes (the thonged sandals used by the Viet Cong). And anyway, everyone is becoming so poor we can't afford to buy gay materials anymore," he wrote.

Property owners in some Saigon districts are discovering that the new ruling committees are requiring households to submit inventories of all items, indicating the pressure may soon mount in the capital. Receipts are required in some districts in order to maintain possession of items such as electric fans and refrigerators.

In highly organized Hanoi, block committees maintain a tight rein over the living habits of residents, reporting to higher authorities small changes in life-styles such as acquisition of a new bicycle.

To people who have been poor all their lives — and that category includes most South Vietnamese — the prospect of a noose tightening around property and the propertied would be of little concern.

AND NEITHER would they recoil at the hard labor in the forests and the fields which many city people, particularly the young, may now have to face.

But there are hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese who enjoyed having possessions, and who also avoided manual labor. They are starting to discover that in the eyes of the new Communist masters of South Vietnam, they are losers on both counts.

MALCOLM EPLEY

FORT BIDWELL—We got our seasonal fire permit today. It seems odd that we must get this bureaucratic approval for even little trash and leaf fires on a country place at least 200 yards from the nearest neighbor. But the burning hours are the interesting part.

The pink sheet says burning shall be confined to the hours between 7 p.m. and 10 a.m.

I asked about the evening restriction of a friend who goes around with a lump in his cheek. He took his tongue out of his cheek long enough to answer:

"Perfectly logical," he said. "Before 7 p.m., your smoke would be added to the fumes, gases and smoke rising from the homebound traffic."

I should have thought of that. Maybe three cars come this way from Cedarville each evening, some coming within a half a mile of our place. Of course, our smoke and those cars would make a lot of pollution.

About the no-fires-after-10 ruling for the morning, my friend said that mid-day burning would add to the smoke rising from industry.

I should have thought of that, too. Cattle raising, our only industry, does make a lot of smoke.

OF course, there's some reason for care about fires during the low humidity part of the day, but I suspect these rules were designed for urban or forested areas and then applied everywhere, whether realistic or not.

That's a problem up here. The legislators and regulators are urban-oriented and make rules for the cities without a thought for how silly they may be for the country.

I've been doing a little lobbying about this, writing to legislators I know. One who has been especially understanding and sympathetic is my old friend, Assemblyman Mike Cullen. Mike knows our problem and has promised to keep it in mind and to talk about it to other city legislators.

Rural area legislators, of course, know all about it, but they're scandalously out-numbered, thanks to the Earl Warren court's one-man, one-vote ruling.

Big Earl was proud of that. Some people think it stinks.

LOOKING out of my window, I'm thinking of another crusade: The glorification of the dandelion.

Why should these golden posies, which just now make a colorful blanket in our barnyard near the pasture, be given such low marks?

It has to be because there so many of them, yet the more there are, the more splash they add to a field or yard.

I'm for promoting them to a higher rating in the floral world.

It's a realistic approach. You can't lick 'em, anyhow.

THIS spring's first visitors from down there were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Levjoki, long-time residents of Harbor City.

They are traveling around with a mobile home and a small station wagon. They left the big vehicle in Goose Lake Park at New Pine Creek and came over Fandango Pass in the station wagon for a look at this place they've been reading about in the column.

The Levjokis arrived at 9:30 and, I'm embarrassed to report, caught me just getting out of bed. Carl knocked quietly at the back door, and they were driving away when I got my pants on and hailed them back.

I explained that this is a working ranch but the work starts a little late in the day.

Anyway, they came at the right season, when this area is at its best. Carl said it reminded him of northern Michigan, where he and Hilda grew up.

Memorial Day: Remembering, or fun?

By JOE SEGURA
Staff Writer

It's a day when the marching reflex is only a memory, battle ribbons are dusty, and shipmates and platoon buddies may be remembered, a day when many are taking the holiday while few are paying tribute to the warriors who made the ultimate sacrifice: Memorial Day, 1975.

At the Long Beach Veteran's Hospital, where male patients either encounter victims of past wars or are themselves picking up the pieces of a life shattered by war, the memories are scarred and the emotions are raw.

SOME are bitter at the lack of tribute paid to the memory of their dead comrades; others seem more philosophical.

Larry Foster, 65, who suffered a spine injury in the Pacific theater, falls into the first category.

"It's too bad that there hasn't been found a way to bring the day to the hearts of more people to pay homage to those who gave their lives," he says. "It doesn't seem like a period of reflection, but a period to get out on the road for the three-day weekend."

News Item: "City and county facilities were gearing up today for several hundred thousand recreation seekers expected to flock to Southland beaches, mountain resorts and parks during the three-day Memorial Day weekend."

Bill Walz, 59, a former master sergeant in communications, has had no opportunity to visit the graves of his Army buddies. They're buried across the country, but the day remains special to him.

"I lost a lot of good friends, and I think about them," he says. "I'd like to see the day observed on the original Memorial Day instead of shifting it all over the place."

But, Jim Waggoner, 27, a Vietnam veteran, who saw less bloodshed during his stint in the Air Force, falls into the second category.

"As long as I can remember, I've never done anything on Memorial Day," he confesses. "It's a good chance to have some fun. Perhaps if I had been touched more closely at home, I might have given the day more thought."

THEN, there's Bob Zollicoffer, 30, who had been in the Air Force for 10 years before he suffered complete paralysis in a car accident while home on leave from his assignment in Thailand. He accepts both methods of observing Memorial Day.

"If I was up and about," he says, "I would use the freedom according to what I felt. If I lost someone, then going to the cemetery would be appropriate. But some people haven't had any loss so they do what they feel is appropriate. Some people use a portion of the day to observe the purpose of the holiday, and the remainder of the day they do what they want."

News Release: "The Memorial Day mood will be recaptured when (Los Angeles Band conductor Herb) Wilkings honors the men of all American wars with a touching rendition of Taps, and the program will be climaxed with Sousa's Stars and Stripes Forever."

Andy Granyk, 54, retired from the Navy after 22 years of service, once participated annually in the Memorial Day commemoration parades down Ocean Boulevard.

"Generally after the parade, we were given coffee and donuts," he recalls. "If I wasn't in the parade, and I had free time, I would go to them."

But, times have changed for Granyk, who once was an active member of Veterans of Foreign Wars — where Memorial Day is the holiday. He hasn't, however, been to a parade in the past couple years, and he's dropped his membership in the VFW.

"IT WAS like going to Alcoholics Anonymous. Everyone got up and talked about the same old experiences," he says. "You couldn't tell who was telling the truth, or not."

Finally, Melvyn Windermine, 41, who saw action in five major battles in Korea as a combat medic, sees hope for the future, if Memorial Day is seriously observed.

"WE CAN govern our-

selves better if we observe the holidays properly, take time to examine our institutions and our leaders," he insists. "Americans should take time to reflect on the men-of all faiths and walks of life—who gave their lives. The lesson we can learn from them is that we can work and live together and try to get along together."

Tomorrow, these men's minds will return to blood tests, X-rays and pretty nurses, but today — for them at least — is a day for remembering.

Southland to honor men killed in battle

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

Solemn Memorial Day services are scheduled to be conducted across the Southland today as the nation pauses to honor its sons who have died in battle.

The holiday, originally called Decoration Day, is also expected to be marked by thousands of private services and family gatherings as flowers are placed on the graves of men who died in battle and American flags are hung over residential doorways in salute to those men.

At least eight formal services are scheduled in the Long Beach-Orange County area, according to spokesmen for various mortuaries and memorial parks.

A 10 a.m. service is slated at Sunnyside Memorial Gardens, 4725 Cherry Ave., Long Beach.

A SPOKESMAN said the service is to include a Bicentennial concert by the Long Beach Municipal Band, under the direction of Everett E. Siegrist; presentation of colors by the 11th Coast Guard District Color Guard; invocations by the Rev. Curtis Foster Grant of the African Methodist Church, the Rev. Gerard O'Donnell of St. Anthony's Catholic Church and Rabbi Arthur Hollander of Glasband-Willen Mortuary.

Sunnyside executive vice president Bud Minor is to give a welcome address, followed by a traditional military rifle salute and taps.

Ret. Navy Chaplain Ward D. McCabe, meanwhile, is scheduled to speak at an 11 a.m. service in the Galilee Navy Family Chapel, 2015 W. Hill St., Long Beach. A spokesman said the service is sponsored by Branch 43 of the Fleet Reserve Association.

AN 11 A.M. service at Angeles Abbey Memorial Park, 1515 E. Compton Blvd., Compton, will be highlighted by the dedication of the city's cenotaph—a plaque bearing the names of Compton men who died in action during World War II and the Korean War.

A spokesman said Judge Everett Ricks, presiding judge of the Compton Municipal Court, will be the featured speaker. The Lyle Smith Gospel Singers, Millikan High School Queen's Honor Guard and members of Golden State Post 279, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Long Beach, also are to participate in the ceremony.

AN 11 a.m. service is also scheduled at Forest Lawn Memorial Park, 4471 Lincoln Ave., Cypress. Officials there said Dr. Frank M. Kepner, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Long Beach, will be the featured speaker.

THE SERVICE, sponsored by the C.R. Rogers Memorial Post 9947, VFW, Cypress, is also to include musical selections by the Cypress High School band.

Retired Navy Chaplain Robert F. Pomeroy is slated to address persons attending an 11 a.m. service at Westminster Memorial Park, 14801 Beach Blvd., Westminster.

A spokesman said Delbert Catron, commander of American Legion Post 555, is scheduled to welcome guests, and members of Westminster Explorer Scout Troop 810 are to present colors.

The Voices of Huntington Valley Choir will provide background music for the service, and the invocation will be given by the Rev. Everett N. Auger, pastor of the First Christian Church of Westminster.

The service will conclude with the placing of a memorial wreath by the United States Air Force Mothers, Daughters of America, Gold Star Mothers, Wives of the Missing in Action and representatives of several other patriotic groups.

THREE Memorial Day programs are scheduled at Rose Hills Memorial Park, 3900 S. Workman Mill Road, Whittier, according to a spokesman there.

A 9 a.m. observance at the Lake of the Roses in the Japanese Gardens will be conducted by the Sixth District Nisei Memorial Post 9902, VFW, and a 10 a.m. observance is scheduled on the same site by priests of the Los Angeles Buddhist Federation.

Community services are scheduled at 11 a.m. in the Hillside Church. The spokesman said the Rev. Irl C. Shahrer, a retired Air Force chaplain now pastor of the Shepherd of the Hills Church in Tujunga, is scheduled to speak. Music will be provided by members of the Montebello High School A Cappella Choir, and representatives of more than 20 veterans, patriotic and fraternal organizations are scheduled to take part.

IN ADDITION to attending traditional Memorial Day services, Southland residents are also expected to mark the holiday at area beaches and parks.

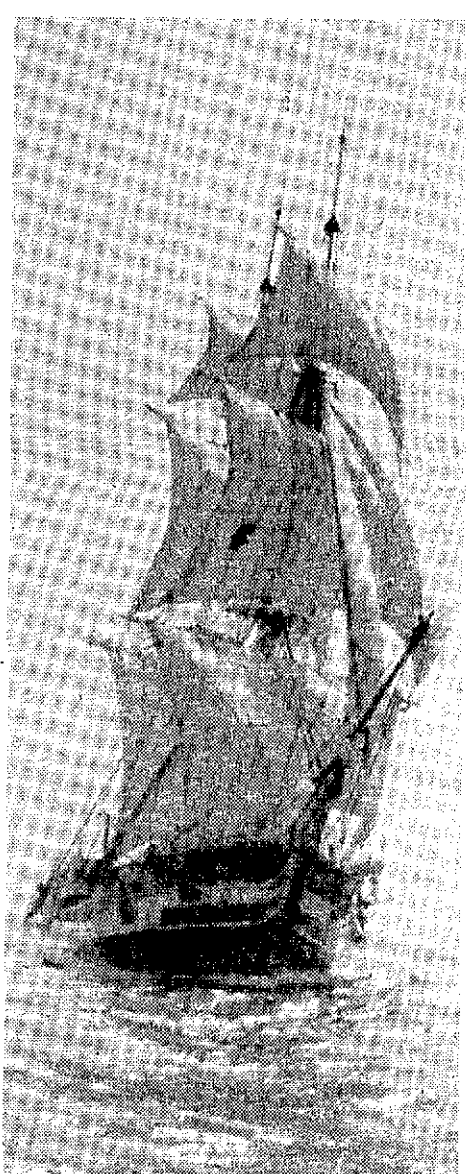

Representatives of Southland recreation departments said most parks will be open, and special holiday activities are scheduled at many playgrounds.

THOUGH no one knows when Decoration Day—a day set aside to decorate the graves of war dead—became Memorial Day, historians generally agree that the holiday originated during the Civil War, when grieving Southern women chose May 30 to decorate the graves of both Confederate and Union soldiers.

Memorial Day now honors all Americans who have lost their lives in battle, including the Civil War (1861-1865), Spanish American War (1898-1899), World War I (1917-1918), World War II (1941-1945), the Korean War (1950-1953) and the Vietnam war (1961-1975).

PILGRIM SETS SAIL FOR SAN PEDRO

Pilgrim will be floating museum

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

A full-scale replica of the Pilgrim, the two-masted sailing ship immortalized in Richard Henry Dana's literary classic, "Two Years Before the Mast," is due to sail into Los Angeles Harbor about mid-June.

A short time later, the vessel is to be opened as a floating maritime museum, according to the ship's designer and first captain, Raymond Wallace of Rolling Hills.

Harbor officials have planned a welcome for the ship that includes a greeting by a fleet of pleasure craft of the Los Angeles Yacht Club and a fireboat welcome. The square-rigged, 137-foot brigantine is to proceed to her permanent berth at the Ports O' Call Village, only 200 yards from where, in 1835, Dana and the crew of the original Pilgrim tossed hides from the present cliffs of Timm's Point at the end of 16th Street in San Pedro.

THE REPLICA of the tall-masted ship that often called at West Coast ports to load hides and tallow for Eastern merchants is presently en route from the Panama Canal to Los Angeles after a trans-Atlantic crossing during which she lost a mast.

While sailing off the California coast, the ship is to drop anchor off the cliffs of Dana Point, where Dana tossed and loaded hides from the San Juan Capistrano Mission in 1835.

AFTER LEAVING Dana Point, the Pilgrim is scheduled to head for the Isthmus at Santa Catalina Island where—with 3,632 square feet of sail billowing from her 112-foot tall masts—she is to run down wind at about seven knots to San Pedro.

Wallace said the Pilgrim was reconstructed from a 100-foot Danish Baltic schooner hull purchased by B.J.W. Expeditions in 1973 and sailed to a shipyard in Setubal, Portugal.

After conversion to its present configuration, the ship set sail for Miami, Fla., under the command of Capt. Wallace. Ship's officers on that 7,000-mile voyage included Joseph Linesch, first mate, Culver City; Edwin B. Watkins, chief engineer, Rolling Hills; Dr. Robert Frie, ship's doctor, Miraleste; and Walter Frank, ship's photographer, Oceanside.

L.B. consumer conference set

Hershel Elkins, deputy state attorney general and head of the statewide consumer protection unit of the attorney general's office, will address Long Beach's second annual Consumer Protection Conference Tuesday, June 3.

The conference, sponsored by the city's Department of Consumer Affairs, will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave.

Attendance will be limited to 350, and registration must be completed this week, according to Charlotte Pownell, city director of consumer affairs. There is no cost for the conference, and a box lunch will be provided for $2 for those who wish it, she said.

Registration may be made by telephoning the Department of Consumer Affairs, 436-7284, or in person at the office, 222 Pacific Ave.

Elkins is scheduled to speak at the morning session. The unit he heads is set up to enforce state law against unfair and deceptive business practices, false and misleading advertising and to prevent unfair competition.

Mrs. Pownell said Elkins will answer audience questions following his remarks.

Afternoon workshops are scheduled in the fields of automotive repair, consumer fraud, product safety, and television and appliance repair, she said.

L.B. students to see how Washington ticks

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

One hundred and fifty students from Long Beach-area high schools and colleges will take part next month in a week-long congressional seminar in the nation's capital, sponsored by the nonprofit Washington Workshops Foundation.

It is the first time since the seminars began in 1967 that so large a group has been accepted from any one community.

During the week, June 22 to 29, the students will meet in informal sessions with senators, representatives, cabinet secretaries, foreign ambassadors and, possibly, with President Ford.

Eight of the seminars already have been held this year, with about 1,500 students taking part.

The director of the Washington Workshops is Noel Gould, who first became interested in the program when he attended a 1969 seminar while a student at Long Beach's Millikan High School. In subsequent years, he worked with the program in various capacities and was appointed director when the founder-director, Leo S. Tonkin, retired last fall.

Students participating in the Washington Workshops pay their air fare to and from Washington as well as a portion of their room and board while in the capital. They live at Mt. Vernon College in Georgetown. The balance of the costs are paid by the foundation.

Gould said the comparatively high costs of air travel have, in the past, limited the number of California students who could participate. This year, he said, through the efforts of Sen. John Tunney, Washington Workshops was able to get authorization from the Civil Aeronautics Board for charter flights. As a result, the special Long Beach program was arranged. About 50 additional students from other parts of the nation will join the Long Beach contingent, Gould said.

There are still a few openings in the local delegation, he added, and any interested high school student may get information by writing to Washington Workshops, 5351 E. Eagle St., Long Beach, Calif. 90815.

"The program's emphasis is on participatory democracy," Gould said. "The foundation only provides a creative medium in which the young citizen may exercise his or her right to be involved."

He said the Washington Workshops make every effort to maintain and, in some cases, regenerate the students' interest in participating in their own communities.

"The students, having experienced the true workings of the democratic process, will hopefully recognize, as the great French student of America, De Toqueville, once stated, 'The community is the true seed of the American democratic success,'" Gould said.

Three other Long Beach students will go with the group as counselors. They are Chris Aiken, graduate of Poly High and now a student at Long Beach State University, who has been working at Washington Workshops since February to help arrange the Long Beach program; Linda Becker, graduate of Wilson High and student at LBSU, and Paul Clark, graduate of Millikan High and student at University of California.

Good intentions

When Congress tightens its belt in the fight against inflation, it is likely a short time later to slip into something more comfortable.

That is what happened when Congress decreed a 10 per cent reduction in government travel spending. The reduction took effect Dec. 27. On Feb. 26 Congress voted to repeal the restriction.

Sen. John McClellan of Arkansas argued that the restriction had caused regulatory agencies to curtail investigatory field work.

Sen. William Roth of Delaware, who proposed the original cut, argued that it would be better to "correct situations where there were true hardships" rather than wipe out the 10 per cent cutback completely.

Most Americans would probably agree. Congress did not. It seems a bad omen for the coming budget.

Beware of the vodka

Consul General Alexander Zinchuk of the Soviet Union was the host at a champagne-tasting party at the Beverly Wilshire the other day.

The party was held to introduce Russian champagne to the United States. Mr. Zinchuk said California was selected for the introduction so the bubbly could be assessed by people who are accustomed to drinking good champagne.

"You will say whether it is good, not so good or bad," the consul general explained. "We hope that — after you have had four or five glasses — you will say it is good."

Apparently, the consul general always speaks that plainly and wittily. His brief toast followed an appearance by someone introduced as a "representative of Monsieur Henri Wines, Ltd.," the American distributors for Russia's Nazdorovya champagnes. Mr. Zinchuk referred to him, though, as "the man from Pepsi Cola."

Pepsi Cola, which acquired

Monsieur Henri some time back, has negotiated a trade deal in which the Soviets get to drink Pepsi Cola and Americans get to drink Soviet champagne and vodka.

It is hard to say who got the better of the bargain. Pepsi Cola is inexpensive, but it does not go well with caviar or even with borscht. The champagnes are in the same class as some of the better California champagnes, but the Soviet champagnes will sell for more: $10 a bottle for the sweeter variety, which struck us as having a little more character, and $12 a bottle for the very dry version.

The vodka is expensive and magnificent. After they served champagne, caviar, blini and piroski, the Soviets wisely closed off the party by pouring large glasses of their Stolichnaya vodka. Instant gemuetlichkeit.

Our advice to Gerald Ford is to go easy on the stuff when he visits Moscow. It has a tendency to make one want to carry detente too far.

Democratic cronyism causes a party flap

WASHINGTON — Donald Fowler, the astute young Democratic state chairman of South Carolina, last January asked his friend and political ally, National Chairman Robert Strauss, whether he knew of any business he could steer down to the Charleston, S.C., advertising agency Fowler had just joined — an understandable request in every way except one: It led to placable foes on the McGovernite left wing with new ammunition in their untiring struggle to destroy him politically.

A Philadelphia agency named Sonder, Levitt and Sagorsky handled the 1974 telethon for a $20,000 fee but was not considered for 1975, according to telethon director Kitty Halpin, because it showed "no interest." However, a partner in the firm, Irv Sagorsky, told us a different story: "We would have liked to do it again. However, we were not asked to participate."

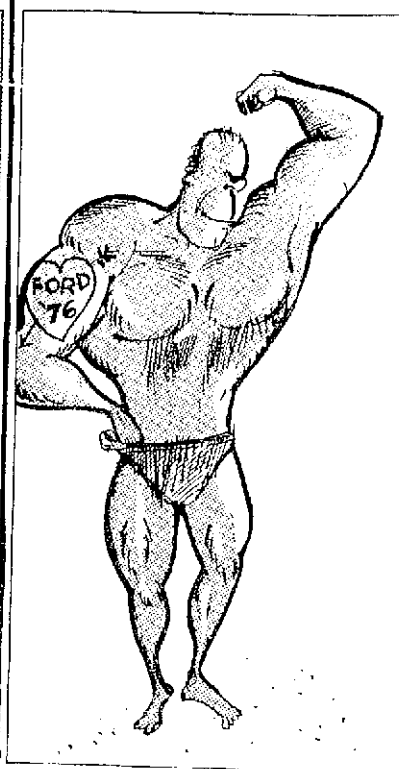

At least one New York firm wanted the contract. But when it telephoned Democratic National Headquarters, according to one officer in the firm, he was told there was no chance.

The unpublicized decision on the contract was made by Strauss and Miss Halpin, with no intention to have it ratified by the party's executive committee. When we checked out the leaks with Strauss and Fowler last Tuesday, Strauss decided to bring the matter into the open the next day when the executive committee was scheduled to meet on routine business.

ARNOLD ALPERSTEIN of Colorado, a leftist committeeman and Strauss critic, hesitantly suggested the telethon ought to "be like Caesar's wife" and suggested the Fowler contract might pose a public relations problem. Strauss followed with a rip-roaring stump speech defending the right to hire qualified friends, declaring: "Is there a public relations committee problem that we have to have? Not if we bury it here."

Although Strauss drew cheers and applause, the matter is not quite buried. The poisonous campaign against Strauss carried on by left-wing political operative Alan Baron will continue with new fuel. Silent in the face of the verbal intimidation from Strauss and Fowler, one middle-roader on the executive committee left the meeting muttering that "it's a damn dumb thing for them to do."

The problem is not size or fee or ability to perform, but a problem of political ethics which today is paramount. If they cannot understand that, worse troubles could lie ahead.

Europe unity

BONN — The social and human aspects of the inflation and depression engulfing Europe have had different repercussions so far on each side of the divide between West and East, with Yugoslavia serving as a kind of bridge of sighs between the two.

Western Europe, which had built a remarkable boom on the availability of cheap oil for energy and of a cheap supplemental labor reservoir of foreign workers, is now in the middle of a squeeze. So far the German Federal Republic and France have escaped more easily than their Common Market colleagues, thanks to intelligent management.

C. L. Sulzberger

New York Times News Service

But even they have experienced increasing difficulties. And when one looks at countries like Britain and Italy, floundering in a mess that threatens political as well as economic stability, one can easily see how worried the European community as a whole now is.

MILLIONS have been suddenly thrown out of jobs or placed on thin rations by the ever-rising cost of living. Quite particular is the situation of the 12 million or so workers and their dependents (approximately 8 and 4 million respectively) who came to industrialized Europe in search of employment, mainly from the Mediterranean basin.

These people — mostly from Yugoslavia, Turkey, Algeria, Portugal, Greece and south Italy — found jobs in West Europe during the boom years when citizens of the industrial lands moved up the social ladder to better positions, leaving a vacuum for the new arrivals. In the past 18 months there has been increasing pressure on the latter to return home as output fell and unemployment mounted.

However, while fewer foreigners manage to scramble in from poorer lands on the Common Market periphery and while a considerable number of those already here have been extruded, the figure of those still here remains very high. What is more, a poor Turk thrown out of work in Germany or a poor Portuguese unemployed in France, can claim compensation, can thrifly exist on it and can even have something left to send back home in remittances.

THUS ONE FINDS certain countries like Turkey making money on Germany's pension system, for example. But the amount is small; and as the actual number of "guest workers" (as Germans call them) dries up, the amount received by poor lands in remittances will diminish, deepening their own depressions.

Faced with this trend, some itinerant laborers in West Europe have been eyeing Communist East Europe with the thought of finding positions there. But the Yugoslavs — who are sorely hit by slump in the Common Market area, where perhaps a million of their compatriots are temporary residents — have studied the eastern prospect and come up with negative reports.

Hardly any labor migration exists inside the rigidly structured Comecon, as Russia's equivalent of the Common Market is called.

Only about 100,000 Poles, Czechs and other citizens of the orbit have been permitted to take jobs in other Communist lands. For a non-Comecon citizen, even one from Communist (if heretical) Yugoslavia, there seems to be no opening.

APART FROM administrative difficulties such as entry and residence permits, and apart from low wages and an unrealistic exchange rate, there are virtually insurmountable problems in transferring earned money home. Anyway, there would be nothing to transfer.

Economists estimate that in terms of internal purchasing power, a Yugoslav worker would earn half as much in Moscow as in Belgrade. Thus, although the idea of transnational labor mobility is now more sympathetically viewed in the Soviet bloc, it is illogical.

So far East Europe has avoided the excessively dismal degree of depression and inflation visible in parts of West Europe. Yet there are signs that in this respect, anyway, Europe is drawing together. Within five years there will be little difference in prices between Comecon and the Common Market.

RUSSIA HAS officially warned its East European partners that raw materials will be permitted to rise until they are in close relationship to world levels outside the bloc. And the previous system whereby manufactured goods were traded for five years at an agreed price has been scrapped.

The obvious must inevitably become more sensitive to the economic development of — or stagnation in — West Europe. In this unhappy but inevitable way whatever the results of continuing European security negotiations, the continent is heading toward one kind of unity at least — union in an economic swamp.

Unique bullet?

EDITOR:

In a recent news item, Dr. Ronald Taylor, director of forensic laboratories in the Los Angeles County coroner's office, was quoted as saying that one Donald DeFreeze was apparently killed "with (sic!) a nickel-plated steel-jacketed bullet."

I am an old man of 81, willing to learn, and eager either to verify or explode myths. I would appreciate reading a letter to the editor from any gunsmith who has ever seen a bullet of this type.

For some 60 years my hobby has been gunsmithing and ammunition-weapons design. At intervals I have heard rumors of steel-jacketed bullets, but discounted the reports as being old wives' tales. Some 45 years ago I did make a few pre-rifled steel bullets, spirally splined to mate with a similarly splined bore. The weapon of course had to be single-shot, to insure proper mating of the male and female splines. Since a bearing of steel-on-steel under pressure will "gall," the rifle bore was bronze-lined, with an expected life of only a very few shots.

My experiments convinced me that a steel or steel-encased bullet was not worthwhile as applied to a portable firearm: greater penetration can be attained by other means, such as accelerating the velocity of a smaller bullet. For instance, by liberating oxygen in the powder charge of a little .22 Long Rifle cartridge, I was able to shoot the soft lead bullet through 3/4-inch steel boilerplate. With a cylinder-bored shotgun, using a blank cartridge as propellant, I was able to shoot a wax candle through a 12-inch live oak tree. So why use steel?

I have seen and used steel cartridge cases; but all Spitzer-pointed rifle bullets I have ever seen were cupro-nickel jacketed, and pistol bullets were either cupro-nickel or cupro-jacketed. I would like to know whether anyone except Dr. Taylor has ever seen a steel-jacketed bullet. Resistant to rifling impression, its velocity would be retarded, it would be highly inaccurate, and destructive to the gun bore.

Beware detente

EDITOR:

Certain proponents of so-called detente have been circulating misinformation about Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington in an attempt to discredit him in the eyes of American voters.

They blame the senator for the failure of the U.S.-Soviet trade pact because of his attempt to link this with freer emigration of Soviet citizens out of their Communist Utopia. They point to the decline in American-Soviet trade, in number of Russians emigrating, and to the ease with which the Communists are still able to obtain credit from private American and European sources. The Soviets fear Senator Jackson because he knows that "detente" to the Russians means American surrender, and he does not hesitate to "talk tough" in his dealings with them.

In fact, the trade bill was doomed when the U.S. Congress clamped a $300-million lid on credits while the Russians wanted billions, and at one-fourth the interest we were charging American borrowers. Economics, not emigration, torpedoed the trade bill. The Soviets used the smoke-screen of emigration to cover their attempt to convert our recession into a major depression. Beware "detente," America!

It seems that Egil Krogh has "suffered enough" also, and can now get back into government as a legislative aide to Rep. Paul McCloskey.

Joneses vanish

EDITOR:

I am trying to locate Mr. and Mrs. James Jasper Jones, who formerly lived in Compton and Whittier, and who I understand have moved to Little Rock, Ark.

In 1971 and 1972 they lived on Leffingwell Street in Whittier and had two or three sons who attended Whittier schools and were active in Little League. Mr. Jones worked for Sears and for 7-11 Food Stores in the Whittier or Santa Ana area.

The reason I want to find this family is that I bought some chests of drawers at a Bekins unclaimed storage sale, and among the contents were family albums, wedding photos, the account of their 1956 wedding, birth certificates for their children, their marriage certificate and a box of Christmas cards with lists of people they exchanged cards with. There were also awards from Granada School in Whittier to the boys for good grades, and to Greg Jones for perfect attendance.

I have written to several former addresses in their Christmas card list, but each letter has been returned for lack of a forwarding address. I have tried to call person-to-person long distance, but with no success. All their friends seem to have completely disappeared also. I also called former coworkers on a list of 7-11 employees, and the two I spoke with remembered the Joneses but do not know where they now are. They seem to have been very popular and well liked, but everybody has lost track of them!

I hope someone who reads this letter will know the address of Jim and Anita Jones or their family. I feel sure they would like to have their family photos back, and I would be most happy to send them to this family if they will send me their address at P.O. Box 554, Tustin, CA. 92680, or will call me at 714-838-2049.

Statistics count

EDITOR:

We wish to thank the Independent Press-Telegram and Frank Anderson for the fine article on the Long Beach Alcoholism Diversion Project. Informative journalism of this caliber helps in our efforts to gain public support for treating rather than jailing alcoholics.

There is one point in the article we would like to clarify. We do, in fact, concern ourselves with statistics. This is a demonstration project and one of our charges is to evaluate and document the most effective methods of managing public inebriates. However, it is true that we do treat our patients as human beings and not as statistics.

Effects of strikes

EDITOR:

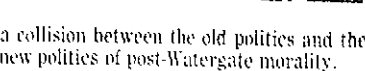

The United States is slicing its people apart in resentment in striking — from doctors to dock workers.

Most of the reasons for striking are extremely valid. Unfortunately, striking is the only way to make one group's purpose become noticed. However, people will separate themselves from others more and more in resentment for inconvenience the striking caused.

Let us think beyond the main purpose of striking to the effect it will bring to all.

a collision between the old politics and the new politics of post-Watergate morality.

Strauss was indeed able to steer a small bit of business Fowler's way — Democratic National Committee business. Without announcement or open bidding, Fowler was given a $25,000 public relations contract for the party's fourth annual national fund-raising telethon (for about two months work). At the same time, Fowler and Strauss were collaborating in a highly successful political operation that resulted in Fowler replacing an arch-enemy of Strauss, Alabama State Chairman Robert Vance, as head of the state chairman's organization.

In no conceivable way does this mixture of business and politics violate any law or party rule. Fowler's fee is reasonable, and his firm qualified. Fowler and Strauss say that they never saw in their arrangement any ethical difficulties.

The incident reflects the strengths and weaknesses of Bob Strauss, in his third flamboyant year as national chairman, by nurturing personal alliances to an unprecedented degree. Strauss has been unexpectedly and remarkably successful in gently nudging his party back toward both moderation and financial integrity while keeping the peace internally. But those alliances always have the potential for old politics cronyism.

That potential seems realized in the Fowler incident, arming Strauss's im-

It was called Decoration Day back then, when I was too young to know why everyone went to the cemetery and put flowers on Uncle Edgar's grave, and talked about dead soldiers.

But it was usually a warm, sunny day, and the graveyard grass was fragrant with its first cutting, and the newly blooming spring flowers smelled good.

There seemed to be a local taboo against driving the ratty old pre-war cars and trucks into the cemetery grounds, so they were parked out on a country road and everyone climbed through the wire fence or squeezed by the narrow opening where a gate was tethered to a post.

I still cherish the memory of an older sister — a teen-ager at the time — desperately trying to act sophisticated while crawling with no great aplomb between the strands of a wire fence held apart by my father.

My mother, of course, as do all mothers, looked perfectly graceful while doing the same thing.

THERE WOULD BE perhaps 10 or 12 cars at any time during the day, bringing flowers to graves. After the closest deceased relative had been prayed over, and sprigs of lilacs had been deposited in mason jars, the mothers and fathers would stand near a grave in hushed piety, the men clutching hats and the women with folded hands. Then after a comment about the disrepair of Grandma's headstone they would move on to look for other recognizable names — an aunt, a grand-uncle, a baby cousin whom no one remembered, and an occasional neighbor.

The comments, too, were as traditional as the day: "Let's see, Great-Grandfather Nolan should be over in the back section. I remember he was near the big cross. It's a shame he never got a bigger headstone...Who in the world would ever want to be buried in a big old mausoleum...Doesn't the grass look so nice. Nelson certainly does a nice job of keeping it up..."

A treasure trove of trivial trinkets

Little Things I Learned En Route to Looking Up Other Things:
• That there were only 11 states in the Union when George Washington was elected President. (I always thought 13, didn't you?)

Sydney Harris

• That more children are killed by cars each year than by all illnesses combined.

• That Florence Nightingale spent less than two years working in war hospitals, and the last 50 years of her life as an invalid recluse, surrounded by cats.

• That more than half the radiation we get from the sun cannot be seen by us; only 40 per cent is the visible light we use in seeing.

• That Hawaiian sounds so repetitious because there are only 13 letters in its alphabet, with only seven consonant sounds.

• That spaghetti is of Chinese origin, rather than Italian; it is probable that noodles were brought back by Marco Polo from the East in the 14th century.

• That at the turn of this century, the death rate from horse travel was eight times as great as today's auto death rate — 32 per 100 million miles, as compared to a little over four per 100 million miles for cars.

• That Abraham Lincoln wore a beard only the last four years of his life, growing one for his 1860 presidential campaign in order to conform to the "statesmanlike" image of the times.

• That the "Hotel de Ville" in Paris is actually the City Hall.

• That Charles Goodrich, the inventor of vulcanized rubber, began his experiments while he was in prison, and then was forced to market his patent rights for a fraction of their true value.

• That only two English words contain all the vowels in proper order: abstemious, and facetious.

• That the nightingale's lovely song is warbled only by the male, and then only during its mating season, to attract the female.

• That the institution of human slavery continued well into the 20th century in such areas as Saudi Arabia, Yemen, the Sudan, Ethiopia, and some areas of the Sahara.

• That the meadow lark is not a lark at all, but belongs to the blackbird family.

• That Bernard Shaw had only a grammar-school education, leaving school when he was 14, and being largely supported by his parents until he was nearly 30. (His first five novels were total failures.)

• That the word "fool" comes from a bellows, or windbag.

George Robeson Call Policeman —he delivers

DON MOLMAR wants me to say something nice about the Long Beach Police Department. Here we go, Don, are you ready?

"Something nice."
Okay, I said it. The rest of the story is the return of Mr. Molmar's wallet, which he lost in some unknown place. The place is unknown, because he carries his wallet where he carries his handkerchief and he blows his nose a lot, which causes him to whip out his handkerchief, which sometimes causes the wallet to fall out of his pocket.

Having suffered since childhood from post-nasal drip, or "Robeson's Disease," as it is called in medical journals, I can understand his problem.

Don Molmar is 64 years old, a retired merchant seaman who walks the same streets he always walked when he was sailing. A street-wise guy, he never carries money in his wallet — a couple of credit cards, perhaps, his seaman's papers, stuff like that is the stuff he carries.

At 1:30 in the morning, the phone in his apartment rings, and it is an officer from the Long Beach Police Department. The Molmar wallet is at the station.

Officers Bob van Dermer and Stu Gordon found the wallet on a bench in Lincoln Park in the dark of the moon. And they really tracked him down and called him up.

HIE WAS PROPERLY appreciative of the policemen's efficiency, but he asked if there was an elevator in the Public Safety Building, because the wallet had to be picked up on the second floor, and Mr. Molmar suffers from a bad case of emphysema.

No problem, the cops told him, stay put.

At 1:45 a.m., just 15 minutes after the telephone call, Officers van Dermer and Gordon were at the door of old Molmar's residence with the wallet.

"Everything I needed was right in it," Molmar said. "I offered the boys a few bucks, you know, but they wouldn't take it."

There is a lot of American cities where they would take it, Mr. Molmar, but this doesn't happen to be one of them.

And I note the time the wallet was delivered, and the fact that both officers were still in uniform. Putting that together with the shift-change, I would say that your two night visitors extended their duty.

time a bit to deliver a wallet to an Old Salt who no longer makes long walks with ease.

It's all part of The Service, they tell me. Not every day, but often enough.

I RECEIVED my stupid jar-opener from the Brookstone "hard-to-find" tools Co. in New Hampshire. I said in an earlier column that I didn't want the damned thing, because a man must find some way to be a hero to his wife these days without riding a horse or slaying a dragon, and opening pickle-jars was the last refuge of the well-meaning male chauvinist. The tool company has a Creative Director named John Talbott, who does not believe me. He compares me with Br'er Rabbit, who begged not to be tossed into the briar patch (where he really would be at home) and suggests that I give up my silly old ideas of masculine superiority, handiness, innate technical skill.

"I myself am a charter member of the Ancient and Honorable Order of the Black Fingernail," he says, "and I've proven my mettle in this fraternity by beating myself severely with every type of hammer and other striking instrument known to Western man."

And so I must accept, without false protest, one each No. 2967.8 Jar Opener, with the company's suggestion that I "keep it concealed in the vicinity of the most likely place you will be the next time your wife comes forth with that pickle jar."

Okay, I got it, and it's a dumb-looking thing. Some rubber, in a loop, attached to a little wooden handle. Now where is my white charger, my threatening dragon?

Well, maybe I'm still ahead of the game. Carolyn will never figure out how to use this gadget.

Medicine and you

By BEN ZINSER

Medical-Science Editor

News, a newsmagazine for physicians.

A study of more than 50,000 births has failed to link two widely known tranquilizers with birth defects.

An earlier study of 19,000 births showed a higher incidence of birth defects in babies of women who had taken meprobamate or chlorthalidone while pregnant.

Meprobamate is known by such trade names as Miltown and Equanil. Chlorthalidone is known as Librium and Librax.

The latest study, conducted by Boston University Medical Center, shows no evidence that either drug, taken during pregnancy, resulted in birth defects.

However, because of the small number of women who took the tranquilizers, the researchers say it is not possible to definitely rule out a potential for causing birth defects for the two drugs. Still, if such an effect exists, it is unlikely to be strong, the report says.

Both reports appear in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Menstrual extraction, a technique used for the early termination of pregnancy, should be done only when tests have definitely confirmed pregnancy, a doctor says.

"The administration of medical or surgical treatment prior to the establishment of a diagnosis is considered poor care," says a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Complications can develop, the report points out. Cited is an instance of a woman who suffered uterine bleeding. Another woman experienced a uterine perforation from the inserted tube.

The perception of middle age varies between men and women and among social classes, reports the Journal Geriatrics.

White-collar groups perceive middle age starting at 50 and old age at 70.

But blue-collar workers see middle age beginning at 40 and old age at 60, indicating they feel "worn out" earlier than their white-collar counterparts.

THE SPEECHES were always dull, and long. And the speaker always wore a service club campaign hat.

While the speaker droned, those of my generation managed to inch away from restricting parental admonitions to poke, shove, giggle, and show off.

A grass-blade whistle, made by cupping a long blade of grass between the hollow formed when two thumbs were placed side by side, always shrieked loudest just as the speaker stopped to underline a poignant point with a moment of silence.

When the agony of enforced attention was past, the rest of the day promised only heady pleasure. Mother and the older sisters would have worked since dawn preparing fried chicken and potato salad for a picnic. After the graveyard ceremony we'd pile into the old car and head off for the river park. Many times the relatives would gather there too and there would be 50 or 70 cousins, uncles, sisters, brothers, grandmothers, grandfathers and stray friends doing destruction to the freshly baked pies and potluck beans.

IT WAS A tearful event if that seductive looking cherry pie baked by Aunt Ruby, the first runner-up pie baker at the county fair, was gone before young taste buds could savor it.

Then, with stomach stuffed and Jewel Tea nectar stains on the Sunday white shirt, it was time to gather for the hall game. This was the dads' and young men's time. If you couldn't hit cousin Frank's fast-pitched softball you had no business trying to play.

So, the women and kids lined up along the edge of the open field and prepared to urge on their heroes and insult the opposition. It was all terribly exciting — for about two innings. Then left-over pie, red and green nectar, and perhaps the exhilaration of a frog hunt outdrew the intensive laborings of the players.

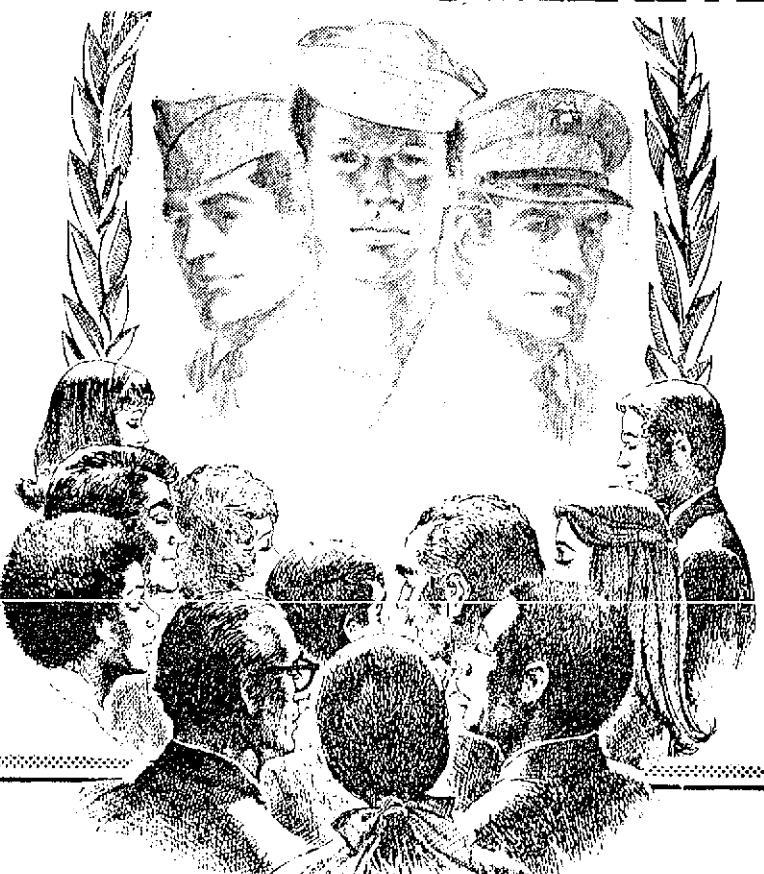

Later, when the ball game was over and the winning pitcher proved again his manliness by chug-a-lugging a bottle of beer, the attention shifted to afternoon lunch and kid games.

THE THREE-LEGGED race was popular, but the most hooting was generated in the potato roll-in which small fry competed for a prize by rolling potatoes over a prescribed course with their noses. The prize was usually a little flag or a sticky caramel sucker.

About four or five o'clock there would always be at least one or two kids who were sick from all that food. And by that time, cousins and aunts and uncles had seen enough of one another, so they drifted off, with assurances that it had been great and that "we should do this more often."

At home, we young ones, after being refused a fifth piece of pie and ordered to retire promptly, would reflect happily on the day, wondering what it had all been about.

Children's glimpse of history

Students at the Patricia Nixon Elementary School in Cerritos react with enthusiasm—and maybe a little boredom—during dedication ceremonies for their school. Meanwhile, the former First Lady, making her first public appearance since her husband resigned the presidency last August, shares a glimpse of the kids with ABC Unified School District board president William Watt, while members of the press gear up for the start of the program. Independent, Press-Telegram Staff Photographer Tom Shaw recorded the scene on film last week as the students—eager to get a look at the woman for whom their school was named—got a first-hand lesson in recent American history. And while they may not know or understand the significance of Watergate, they know Mrs. Nixon must be important to have a school named for her.

Services set for Air Force crash victim

Funeral services for Air Force Sgt. Robert W. Ross of Cypress, who died in a helicopter crash apparently related to the Mayaguez rescue operation, are to be conducted Tuesday in Westminster.

Services are scheduled for 3 p.m. in the chapel at Westminster Memorial Park, 14801 Beach Blvd.

Sgt. Ross' wife, Jacqueline, said she was notified that her husband died in a helicopter crash in Thailand May 13, but she had no details of the tragedy.

Air Force spokesmen earlier said a helicopter, with four crewmen and 18 Air Force security policemen, crashed May 13 after taking off from an Air Force base in northern Thailand for a flight to Bangkok.

All 22 aboard the helicopter and one crewman on the ground died.

The spokesmen said the helicopter was making the trip to stand ready for possible use in aiding the rescue of the American merchant vessel which was being held by Cambodian forces.

Sgt. Ross is survived by his wife and his 14-month-old daughter, Melinda Kay; by his father, Robert G. Ross; stepmother, Donna L. Ross; sister, Donna Lou; and brother, Roger.

Other survivors include his grandmother, Charlotte Trevarrah; sisters, Connie and Vickie, and stepbrother, Michael. Sgt. Ross was preceded in death by his mother, Mae Ballou Ross.

Born July 9, 1954, in Edgerton, Wis., Sgt. Ross moved to Cypress with his parents in 1957. He attended Western and Los Alamitos high schools, and was an Explorer Scout with the Cypress Police Department.

In November 1974, two years after he joined the Air Force for a career, Sgt. Ross was transferred to Thailand.

Instead of flowers, the family has requested remembrances be made in Sgt. Ross' name to the 29th District Orange County American Legion Fund.

Hospitals plan disaster drill

A simulated explosion in Saint Matthew's Lutheran Church of Lomita will test the emergency capability of Bay Harbor and Harbor

General hospitals and Kaiser Hospital in Torrance at 10:00 a.m. June 5.

The Los Angeles City Fire Department will initiate the disaster exercise by alerting Harbor General and requesting that a medical emergency team be sent to the church, a spokesman for the county Department of Health Services announced.

Forty student "victims" will be sent to the three hospitals, with Harbor General serving as a command post.

Other participants in the exercise include the Office of Civil Defense, Harbor Regional Occupational Center, Los Angeles Police Department and Schaefer's Ambulance Service.

HEALTH NEWS . . . Your Aching Back Means That You Are Important

By Dr. W. P. Helzer, D.C.

Each day an average of 67 million Americans —most of them successful men — are laid up with a new status symbol, the backache, which has replaced the ulcer as the badge of high-pressure living.

You have to realize that in many ways your back attacks are the result of stressful living.

And so one way to stave off that next attack is to reduce the nervous stress in your life.

Stop doing things you don't really like to do, like taking on jobs and assignments you really don't enjoy.

If someone irritates you, tell him or her so, and that includes your mate. It helps to blow your top once in a while.

Most backache sufferers are men 35 to 64 years old and women under 45.

Once you have had a stress backache you can count on it to re-occur again and again, just as surely as the sun will rise each day.

It left untreated its recurrence will become that predictable.

Of course, chiropractic has proven itself as the premium response to the backache problem.

The warning signs of stress backache are reasonably simple to note. Frequently, yawning in a fatigued state will cause a person to "wince" or double over to avoid what they feel will be a rib popping out of place or a muscle spasm.

Sometimes the tightness in the back or the hips or legs will grow with stress or pressure, and serve as something of a distress signal, warning of a backache to come.

You cannot avoid stressful responsibilities of this modern day life we live. But you can seek significant care of backache problems and to condition the body to their prevention.

It's in this sense that chiropractic has been a God-send to contemporary American life.

Do you have a question? Write Dr. Wes P. Helzer, D.C., c/o Helzer Chiropractic Offices, 9461 Flower, Bellflower, telephone 866-3721.

Hockey buff Kate Smith takes slap shot at 'fat' talk

NEW YORK — Kate Smith was jumping for joy the other day and that's a lot of joy to be jumping with. Kate's adopted hockey team, the Philadelphia Flyers, had just beaten the Sabres 2-1 and Kate didn't even have to be there to "psych" them into it. Kate was getting the Catholic Actors Guild George M. Cohan Award much of the afternoon and pretending to resent that they call her a fat lady. "I'm no fat lady," she spoke up. "I lost 90 pounds in three years. One writer called me a fat lady seven times. He should have seen me 90 pounds ago."

"NO SIR! 'God Bless America' is a prayer thanking Almighty God for all the blessings bestowed on our country. Irving Berlin wrote it in 1918. When I sang it in '38 they said I was a flag-waver. I decided I'd wave the flag all the way. I made them hear it once a week on radio. The dissenters gradually wrote in that they were wrong."

Kate, "a born hockey nut," says her singing support of the Philly team produces a kind of mass hysteria. At 64, she's in great demand and figures she's working on her sixth generation of listeners. She never lent her voice to any New York hockey teams.

"The Rangers have been in business 45 years," she said. "Well, that's how long I've been in New York. They never knew I existed."

I MUST be a complete coward because I didn't have the nerve to ask Kate how much she weighs now. Do you know any way to ask her? She once wore a size 52 dress but she got that down to a 42. "Are you campaigning to get 'God Bless America' made the national anthem?" I asked.

The magic of a beautiful thing is the gladness sharing it can bring.

I would still like to know how to ask her that delicate question.

Today's Best Laugh: A fellow nominated his wife as world's worst driver: "Yesterday she almost hit a traffic helicopter."

Shirley Jones, Cassidy split

United Press International

Actress Shirley Jones, star of "The Partridge Family" television series, has been granted a divorce from actor Jack Cassidy, ending their 18 years of marriage, Los Angeles Superior Court records showed.

The 41-year-old actress was awarded custody of the couple's three children, Shaun, 16, Patrick, 13, and Ryan, 9.

Berlin struck off Sinatra schedule

NEW YORK (UPI) — Spokesmen for singer Frank Sinatra said Sunday he has canceled a concert scheduled in Berlin today because of attacks on him in the Berlin press and because of concern that he might become the target of a kidnapping attempt.

Sinatra currently is in London during a tour scheduled for 10 appearances in seven countries.

SINATRA'S representatives accused the Berlin press of "a relentless and scurrilous attack on Mr. Sinatra, engaging in an orgy of vitriolic lies relating to his personal and professional life."

"More important," they said, "there have been repeated dissemination of stories in the Berlin press with rumors and speculations that when Frank Sinatra comes to Berlin he will be kidnaped or otherwise subject to physical attack."

The representatives said in a written statement that "the decision has been made not to expose Frank Sinatra to the community where his physical safety is in jeopardy, particularly since a large segment of that community's news media seems determined to commemorate Sinatra's appearance by mounting a vicious attack on Mr. Sinatra."

Sinatra has just finished two appearances in West Germany, at Munich and Frankfurt.

Talk focuses on jobless teen-agers

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

Do you know a girl who:

- Has dropped out of high school?
- Is unable to find or hold a job?
- Has a poor self-image?
- Lives in a disruptive home environment?

If you do, the Women's Job Corps has a message.

Just pick up your phone and dial the Women In Community Services (WICS) office in Long Beach. That one quick phone call could make a world of difference to that girl.

IN HER ADDRESS last week at a luncheon marking the 10th anniversary of the opening of the WICS office in Long Beach, Arlene Ware, director of counseling and guidance services at the Los Angeles Job Corps Center, told probation officers, school counselors and others who work closely with young people that the Los Angeles site currently has 18 openings for girls who qualify for Job Corps training.

Two satellite locations — one in San Pedro, the other in East Los Angeles — are accepting applications from young women who wish to live at home while completing their training. (The Downtown Los Angeles site is a residential program.) Girls who meet Job Corps specifications also may be placed in training centers at Tongue Point, Ore. or Albuquerque, N.M.

Since many of those present were unfamiliar with Job Corps, Ms. Ware talked briefly about the federal agency's purpose and program. Among points touched on during her talk:

- The Job Corps was established 10 years ago during the Johnson administration to provide vocational training for poverty-level young men ages 16 to 21 who found themselves out of school with no marketable job skills. Later the program was expanded to include young women in that same age and income level group.

- Funds are provided through the Department of Labor. In Los Angeles, those funds are administered by the YWCA, which runs the L.A. program out of an old Y facility at 1106 S. Broadway. Each center negotiates separately for funding. According to Ms. Ware, the Los Angeles center will be coming up for refunding in June. She anticipates no problems in obtaining additional money and pointed out "we have a good reputation and have been successful in what we're trying to do. I don't see any signs that the government is thinking about closing the center or making any significant cutbacks."

- TRAINING IS offered in 50 different job categories ranging from such traditional vocational choices as clerical work, cosmetology and health occupations to non-traditional areas such as wood-working, electronics and drafting. In addition to on-site training programs, Job Corps counselors work closely with city colleges and other vocational training centers in order to offer the young women the widest range of training possible.

- The training period runs from six months to two years, depending on the career choice of the individual. During that period, participants spend eight to ten weeks brushing up on basic education skills (reading, mathematics, health education). Those who did not complete high school have to opportunity to earn a General Equivalency Diploma.

The remainder of the time is devoted to vocational training.

- The Los Angeles Job Corps has a placement rate of 4 out of 5 of its 1,900 graduates. Most graduates put their Job Corps training to work immediately by taking jobs in areas in which they receive training. A few, however, go right on to a four-year college or university.

Ms. Ware, with the assistance of Edna Statman, director of the WICS office in Long Beach, explained the role Women In Community Service plays in the Job Corps program.

According to Ms. Ware, boys wishing to enter the Job Corps are screened and placed by state employees at the Employment Development Department. Girls are interviewed, tested and placed in appropriate Job Corps sites by members of WICS, a national voluntary support organization composed of representatives of the National Council of Catholic Women, the National Council of Negro Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, Church Women United, the American GI Forum Auxiliary and the League of United Latin American Citizens.

"HOW DOES THAT work?" questioned a woman in the audience. "I mean, I think it's commendable these women volunteer their time. But what happens if there aren't any volunteers? Doesn't it seem a little unfair that the boys program is run by paid people and the girls program isn't?"

Ms. Ware agreed that the situation was probably a little "discriminatory" but added that the utilization of volunteers has meant that more money has gone directly into services for young women.

Mrs. Statman pointed out that the program has been functioning for almost 10 years now and added "When Nixon tried to close the Job Corps, WICS volunteers were able to lobby for its continuation. Unlike others involved in the Job Corps, WICS members couldn't be fired."

Mrs. Statman outlined what WICS volunteers look for in selecting girls for Job Corps training.

"The first thing we look for is motivation. Does the young woman want to improve herself? And does she really want to go into the Job Corps?"

"Next we measure her mental abilities. Sometimes a girl might score low because English is her second language or because of some other social or cultural situation. We look at the entire situation, not just test scores."

"We also find out if the girl has any physical disabilities that would make it impossible for her to function in a residential program. We look for severe psychological problems. And, of course, if the girl is under 18, we need her parents' consent."

IN PAST YEARS, WICS volunteers have made home visits to girls and their families to explain the program and what the Job Corps will expect of the young woman. Since the gas shortage, however, volunteers have depended on the telephone and have worked primarily out of the WICS office at the YWCA, 550 Pacific Ave.

"How long does it take before a young woman can be placed in a training program?" an audience member asked.

Mrs. Statman responded, "We'll talk to the girl just as soon as we get a call from her. After that, it depends on whether there's a bed available or room for her in the appropriate Job Corps program."

Ms. Ware noted that the term Women's Job Corps Center is a misnomer for the Los Angeles site. The center now accepts young men, she said, though they do not live in the downtown facility.

"Right now we have openings for 20 men in the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks union program," Ms. Ware said the BRAC training program doesn't guarantee a job, but it can lead to a well-paying clerical job in the railroad and airline industries.

ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS

'Women should take back power'

By DIANNE SMITH
Staff Writer

Adela Rogers St. Johns, who was a liberated woman in her manner and dress before the term became popular, took women to task for not using the power at their command to right what's wrong with America.

She called upon women to take back the power they once had. "The greatest single force in this country used to be the woman's vote. We no longer have this unity, but we still have the power."

The spunky Mrs. St. Johns, now 81, was dressed in her usual pantsuit when she addressed the annual state meeting of California Press Women at El Niguel Country Club in Laguna Niguel.

Despite her outspokenness and "liberated attitudes," Mrs. St. Johns is not enamored of the current Women's Liberation Movement. "I will not come down long enough to be equal with men," she quipped.

"I have yet to see a woman discriminated against because she's a woman. This women's lib junk has done more harm to women. I don't understand what's being done to us (women). You'd think we'd been hiding under a rock all this time and never accomplished anything."

"That's why I wrote my book." ("Some Are Born Great," controversial tales of extraordinary women of our times). "These are women I covered personally," she said, referring to her many years as a reporter with the Hearst newspapers.

"How do you think we got the vote?" she asked. "Men gave it to us. I know. I was there. I covered it. And they gave it gladly. The reason it took so long was that it was an amendment to the Constitution."

"I'VE ALWAYS encouraged opportunities for women and I'll continue to help in any way I can, but hostility is not the way. If we go on belittling ourselves and arousing hostility and antagonism, we'll go down."

Covering a variety of subjects, Mrs. St. Johns talked briefly about some of the women in her latest book. "It begins with the only American saint, St. Francis Cabrini. Mother Cabrini accomplished miracles in the real estate business, starting schools and hospitals where there were none."

"The two best selling books America has known

Adela Rogers St. Johns will be the featured speaker at annual dinner meeting June 5 of the Friends of the Long Beach Public Library.

The event will take place in the Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St., beginning with no-host cocktails at 6:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7:30. Tickets are $6.50 each and reservations may be made with Mrs. Ann Andriess, 3107 Lama Ave., Long Beach 90808. Deadline is Saturday.

Copies of Mrs. St. Johns' books will be available and she will sign autographs at time permits.

were written by women -- "Gone With the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell and "Science and Health of Mind" by Mary Baker Eddy, who also started one of the great newspapers, The Christian Science Monitor.

"She started it by writing a note to her students that said simply 'you will start a daily newspaper called the Christian Science Monitor' and within one year it was on the streets."

Turning to pornography, Mrs. St. Johns commented, "I'm startled by the porno books being bought by middle-aged women. I'm amazed at the giggling over dirty stories. They wouldn't keep writing such bunk if they didn't make money on it. Stop buying them," she chided. "The kids aren't buying them. They're doing it, they don't have to read about it."

She challenged women to action. "Remember the power you've always had. Women can stop anything they want to. The power has always been in the hands of women. Why abrogate it?"

"A free press is the first of all freedoms," she added, telling her audience to write stories that will correct wrongs within the community. "Why do allow things to go on? All women have to do is raise their voices."

SHE ALSO SAID the main addiction problem with teen-agers is not drugs or marijuana, it's alcohol. "That's harder to face. I have four Alcoholics Anonymous meetings at my home in Malibu -- all composed of teen-agers. One group has a 13-year-old boy. They have one thing in common. They all come from broken homes. There's nobody there when they get home from school." Mrs. St. Johns is a recovered alcoholic herself and she has recently stopped smoking as well.

"I smoked 2½ packs of cigarettes a day from the time I was 12 until a few years ago. I stopped by the grace of God. I tried to stop many times. I asked for God's help and was healed. I realized how I smelled of stale cigarette smoke."

"Smoking has nothing to recommend it. It's ugly. There's nothing uglier than to see a woman walking down the street with a cigarette in her mouth."

One book which she recommends highly for everyone's reading is "Plain Speaking" by Harry Truman. "There's more love, humanity and God in it than any other book. It can help rectify what's wrong with the country."

OUTSPOKEN author and octogenarian Adela Rogers St. Johns.

"We have to live up to our motto 'In God We Trust'...and women can bring it back...the love for fellow man -- without it, it's the end of civilization," she commented.

Justweds take trips

Footdale-Brown

Millikan High School graduates Susan Brown and Larry Footdale were married in a Friday evening ceremony at Lakewood Presbyterian Church.

Karen Brown was her sister's maid of honor. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Milo E. Brown Jr. of Long Beach. William Schwar served as best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Footdale, also of Long Beach.

The bride attended Long Beach City College, where her husband is now a student.

A first home in Long Beach is planned following return from a honeymoon trip to Palm Springs.

Bruce-Erwin

Honeymooning at Crestline following their wedding Saturday morning in Our Lady of Refuge Catholic Church are Mr. and Mrs. Terry Alan Bruce (Virginia Lou Erwin).

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Erwin of Long Beach asked the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Pam Thompson, to be matron of honor. Joe Eno was best man for the son of Mrs. Menard Blagburn of Austin, Texas.

The bride is a graduate of St. Joseph's High School and attends Cerritos College. Her husband attended school in Texas and is serving with the Marine Corps at Camp Pendleton.

The newlyweds will make their home in Bellflower.

Borrelli-Garriott

Anita Jeanne Garrriott became the bride of David Borrelli in a Saturday morning ceremony at First Christian Church.

Mrs. Kenneth Nasser was matron of honor for the daughter of Emmet L. Garrriott and Mrs. Georgia E. McDonald, both of Long Beach. Michael Borrelli was his brother's best man. They are sons of Carmine Borrelli of Long Beach and Mrs. Ruth Borrelli of Lakewood.

An alumna of Polytechnic High School, the bride attended Long Beach City College. The bridegroom, a graduate of Jordan High and LBCC, attended Long Beach State University.

Following a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, the couple will be at home in Long Beach.

Grabenaue-Beck

A first home in Killeen, Texas awaits newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Everett Grabenaue following return from a honeymoon to Hawaii. They exchanged nuptial vows in a Sunday afternoon ceremony at Cameo Wedding Chapel.

The former Trudy Anne Beck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde M. Beck of Long Beach, was attended by Schelly Kay Jensen, maid of honor. Kenneth Custus performed best man duties for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Grabenaue of Napa.

The bride is a graduate of Millikan High School, Long Beach City College and Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, where her husband also earned his degree. He also is an alumnus of Napa College. She affiliated with Phi Kappa Phi honor society, the American Dietetics Association and Army Medical Specialist Corps. He was a member of the 4-H Club.

Blackburn-Price

Long Beach Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints was setting Friday evening for exchange of nuptial vows uniting Dori Lynn Price and Curtis Lee Blackburn.

The daughter of Verne Price of Long Beach and Mrs. Richard Doyle of Santa Maria was married to the son of Mr. and Mrs.

George Blackburn of Long Beach. Lorri Ray McClellan was maid of honor and Kelvin Ray Blackburn served his brother as best man.

The newlyweds are both graduates of Millikan High School. The bride attended Allan Hancock Junior College in Santa Maria and the bridegroom studied at Long Beach City College.

Following a honeymoon in Las Vegas, the couple will make a first home in Long Beach.

Nygaard-Pearson

Honeymooning in Mexico following their exchange of nuptial vows Saturday afternoon in Christian Life Church are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Edward Nygaard (Ruth Pearson).

The daughter of Mrs. R.L. Diffey of Long Beach asked Sheryl Weatherpoon to be maid of honor. Gerald Buzzell was best man for the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Nygaard of Palmdale.

The bride is an alumna of Millikan High School and attends Long Beach City College. Her husband is attending Southern California College in Costa Mesa, where he is on the soccer team.

The newlyweds will make a first home in Long Beach.

Pirate theme for Plazaquatics

Ahoy mate!

Pirates will be roaming the Treasure Island home of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Roelfsema Saturday when Plazaquatics VII, benefit for Family Service of Long Beach, casts anchor for an evening of fun and food.

Grog will be served starting at 7 p.m., with dinner at 8. Each dinner ticket at $12.50 per person or $10 donation entitles the "pirate" to loot the treasure chest.

The Roelfsema's ship is located at 5619 Corso di Napoli. Mrs. Selden Gebb, 6541 Bacarro St., is keeping track of crew members.

PROCEEDS will go to support Family Service, an agency of United Way. The basic goal of Family Service is to strengthen family life by providing counseling, homemaker service to families in times of crisis and to aid the chronically ill and aged.

Persons also are referred to agencies offering financial, psychiatric, health or other needed services. Applications are available from the FS office at 1041 Pine Ave.

IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

In the Pacific Southwest Regional held in San Diego the winners of the Master Pairs were Peter Radwin, Culver City, and Chuck Williams, Redondo Beach.

A major suit game with an eight-card trump fit should always be preferred to a minor suit game. However, when the opponents are in the bidding, sometimes it's not so easy to discover the trump fit.

Note South's choice of three hearts in response to North's takeout double. This might surprise those who always bid their longest suit, however, the bid has much in its favor.

In American methods, a takeout double promises support for unbid suits and especially unbid major suits. Therefore, the choice of the heart suit over the club suit is not as risky as it may seem. Further, if there is a game in the hand, the game should be much more likely in the major suit rather than the minor suit.

Had South bid only two hearts or two clubs — the minimum forced response — that bid would not have done justice to the hand. A minimum forced response could be made with little or no strength and North would be in no position to assess the combined strength.

MODERN techniques require the responder to a takeout double to make an invitational jump response with a hand that has chances for game (10-12 points) and to cue bid the opponents' suit when game is a good bet but the correct game is uncertain.

West took two high spades and shifted to a club. Declarer won and started the trumps. However, when West discarded on the second lead, declarer could no longer afford to draw all the trumps. Had he done so, declarer would lose control and the contract as well. So instead of continuing trumps, declarer led a diamond to establish a 10th trick. Whether West won immediately or not, declarer was in no danger.

A spade could be ruffed in either hand, East's trumps could then be drawn and the defense held to their three top tricks.

Make your handbag a showcase for your needlepoint skills. The three monogram squares are worked in basic tent stitch, while the surrounding ones are miniature samplers of pattern stitchery. It can be your secret that the pattern stitch squares are quicker and simpler to work than the basic stitch. The pocketbook shown has a plastic covered "window" designed to hold a needlepoint insert, but you can glue a piece of similar size to the side or flap of many bags ... or enlarge the design to make a pillow, wall hanging for even a rug. The instruction leaflet has clear illustrations for the overall design and illustrated diagrams for each stitch used. For a piece this size only one skein of the main color and a few yards of the contrast color are needed. To obtain directions for making this needlepoint design, send your request for Leaflet MY-25 with 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, Dept. LBI, P. O. DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My brother and I are 17-year-old identical twins. Our parents have been separated since we were 10, and we haven't seen our father since then.

My twin brother and I are very close. (We have no other brothers or sisters.) Some people think that we feel "incomplete" when we're apart, but the truth is that we are always together because we really want to be. We have most of the same friends, doubledate a lot and stick together out of choice, not out of need.

Next year we will be going off to college. We want to go to the same college, but our mother says that we should go to different colleges so that we can learn to be independent. Our guidance counselor says it's time we made a break from each other.

Abby, we don't really want to make a break.

Are they right? Or are we? — A TWIN we don't eat in the living room and we are neater than they are.

What do you think? Don't you think my parents should practice what they preach? — HUNGRY IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR HUNGRY: They should. But there is no way of forcing them to. They belong to that big club whose motto is: "Don't do as I do — do as I say." Unfortunately, rank has its privileges, and parents outrank their kids.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law died recently. She had one daughter and three sons — all of whom are married.

All of her good stuff she left to her daughter. Everything else (the junk) she left to her daughters-in-law.

I fell heir to a well-worn beaver coat. It's at least 20 years old and looks it. I know that I will never wear it, so I'd like to donate it to our church auxiliary resale shop.

My husband says he doesn't care what I do with it, but it has his mother's name embroidered on the lining, and he's afraid people will think I'm disrespectful if I donate it to the resale shop. What would you do? — GOOD FOR NOTHING

DEAR GOOD: I'd remove the name and donate it.

DEAR ABBY: I have been debating for months which of the following I should do regarding a neighbor who has seven children and an unbelievable amount of trash, which, for some strange reason, she doesn't seem able to control.

(1) Buy her seven jumbo cans with tight lids.
(2) Make a phone call requesting that she kindly bag her trash.
(3) Call the police and ask them to give her a ticket for littering.

Bobby 'rains' again

Indianapolis 500 stopped by storm after 435 miles

By MIKE HARRIS
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS—Bobby Unser, a raw-boned and hungry veteran, took advantage of a rapid series of breaks on a hot and humid Sunday and won his second Indianapolis 500 amid the mass confusion of a thunderstorm that stopped the race 65 miles short of completion.

Unser, 41, from Albuquerque, N.M., joined his younger brother Al as a two-time winner of the Indy, cut short for only the fourth time in its 59-year history and one in which favored A.J. Foyt failed to reach his dream of a fourth victory.

The rain came suddenly and hard, slowing the cars to a snail's pace and turning the world's most famous and prestigious auto race into a comedy of errors. Officials ended it at 435 miles on the 174th of 200 scheduled laps.

Unofficially the race was timed 2 hours, 54 minutes, 55 seconds for an average speed of 149.213 mph.

Unser, who won this $1 million event seven years ago, said he was driving on the backstretch on the 171st lap when former driving great Dan Gurney, who built and prepared the one-year-old winning car, messaged him it was raining on the front part of the track.

He noted that he had just made a pit stop and said, "I don't believe we would have had to make any more...I think we were on our way, anyway."

PERHAPS. But running in the same lap with the winner were runnerup and defending champion Johnny Rutherford and Foyt, the 40-year-old millionaire Texan, both of whom could easily have won if Unser had faltered.

The end was perhaps one of the strangest developments ever at the old Brickyard. The rain made the sleek, $100,000 racing machines almost incapable of operating.

Steve Krisloff wound up the race with his car sitting backwards on the straightaway as he frantically waved at the drivers coming toward him. Three other cars came together in a minor fender-bender.

Two hours later, as the sky cleared and the track dried, there were questions raised as to why officials did not stop the race.

Complete results, more photos on C-2.

and see if it could be restarted. Chief Steward Tom Binford, who made the race-ending decision, said:

"There was no assurance it would dry, no assurance that it would not start raining again. In my mind, to stop it and then have a 65-mile sprint race didn't meet the requirements."

This was the fourth rain-shortened race since the event began in 1911, with Johncock winning after 332½ miles, Johnnie Parsons taking the 1950 race in 345 miles and Frank Lockhart the winner after 400 miles in 1926.

Indy rules allow the race to be stopped and declared official once it is halfway completed.

Haden: McKay will accept Tampa job

Pat Haden held 'em spellbound when he spoke to a Men's Night gathering at the Candlewood Country Club the other evening.

The Rhodes Scholar who quarterbacked USC to a national championship and a Rose Bowl victory over Ohio State told the audience he expects Trojan coach John McKay to accept an offer to coach the expansion National Football League team in Tampa in 1976.

"Sure, I think he's going to accept it," said Haden. "They've offered him all the money in the world, and if that's not enough, they'll throw in a Tampa cigar factory."

Haden said he's looking forward to playing with the Rams when he completes his studies at Oxford in 1977.

"I expect to sign a Ram contract within a few days," said Haden. "I've been talking to them regularly and coach (Chuck) Knox has told me he thinks I can definitely play for his team."

"I feel I owe it to myself to try to make it in the NFL—it's the best football and a person never knows whether he can cut it until he tries."

Responding to questions from the packed house, Haden reminded those present he was from Bishop Amat High School—"that's a school with 1,600 kids, of which 1,550 are football players."

Haden said he could tell the audience some of the things coach McKay said at halftime of USC's stirring 55-24 victory over Notre Dame, and "I can't tell you some of the other things he said."

The Trojans trailed the Irish, 24-6, and, said Haden,

Warriors complete sweep

Combined News Services

LANDOVER, Md. — Al Attles missed the finest moment of his 4½-year coaching career.

Attles, whose Golden State Warriors whipped the Washington Bullets Sunday, 96-85, to win the NBA title, was tossed out of the game in the first period when he rushed onto the floor after a confrontation between the Bullets' Mike Riordan and Rick Barry.

"He thought I was fighting," said Attles amid the bedlam in the Warrior locker room. "I wasn't fighting, I was trying to get Rick out."

Referee Rickie Powers gave Attles a technical foul and ejected him. When Attles questioned the ejection, Powers gave him another technical.

But any bitterness Attles may have harbored about the incident was washed away in a flood of champagne.

"I would have done the same thing," said Attles of Riordan's pushing of Barry. "I'm not knocking their tactics. They were trying to get Rick out."

"I was just trying to play hard basketball, ordinary playoff basketball," said Riordan.

In registering their fourth consecutive victory over the beleaguered Bullets and completing only the third four-game sweep in NBA title history, the remarkable Warriors staged another dramatic comeback, overcoming a 14-point second-period deficit.

"Words are totally inadequate to describe my feelings at this point," said usually volatile Barry, the Warrior's scoring leader with 20 points for the game, 118 in the

Lopp tumbles, 8-7 Match Play to Campregher

By DOUG IVES

The Bull was too strong. Driving the ball out of sight and putting deftly, husky Tony Campregher easily beat banker Keith Lopp, 8-7, Sunday at Skylinks to win the 51st Long Beach Match Play Golf Championship.

It was the fifth major victory for the 6-foot, 205-pound bundle of nervous energy and it was his easiest, too, because there was no doubt about the outcome after he won the first five holes.

Normally a smooth swinger, Lopp hit everywhere but the fairway in losing six of the first seven, failing to make par on all of them. A weekend golfer, he finally played like one in this match.

To his credit, Lopp made two brief comebacks to avoid being embarrassed. But Campregher was

Angels' Senior Sunday silences Sox

By DON MERRY

BOSTON—In addition to giving the Angels a lift Sunday, Eddie Figueroa succeeded in giving himself one, too.

Right to the penthouse. Figueroa, whose demoralizing prospect this spring was trying to crack what Dick Williams refers to as baseball's best starting staff, has done just that. Even though he is two months late.

"I can't see how we can continue to spot start him any more," Williams analyzed after Figueroa frustrated and teased the Boston Red Sox with a three-hitter that propelled the Angels to a 4-1 triumph.

If Figueroa upset the Sox with his confusing assortment—manager Darrell Johnson, Carl Yastrzemski and Bernie Carbo were ejected by plate umpire Lou DiMuro for wondering aloud if the strike zone was larger than customary—the man he is most likely to rattle is fellow pitcher Andy Hassler.

Figueroa's recent successes—his three-hitter Sunday followed a three-hitter victory against Baltimore nine days ago—and Hassler's recent failures make it a virtual certainty that the easy-going senior from Puerto Rico will replace Hassler among the Big Four.

"I just don't want to be a Mr. Sunday," Figueroa grinned after running his record to 3-0, "although I prefer four days between starts whereas most of the others would rather have only three."

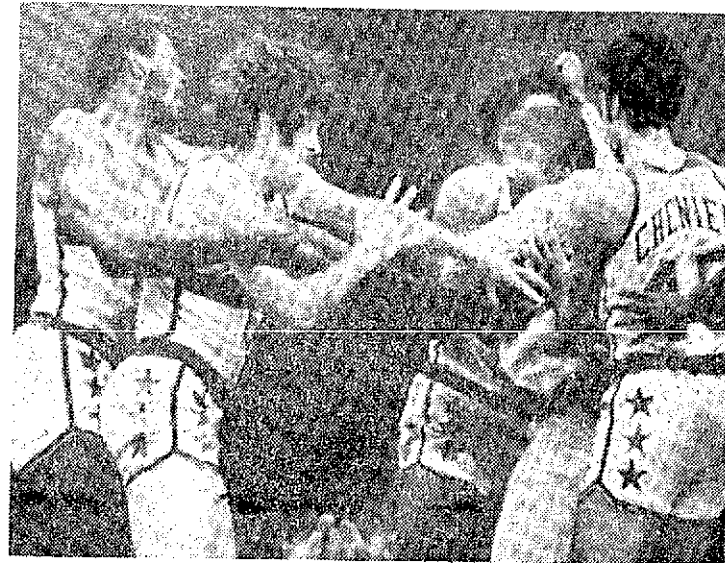

Figueroa, who could best be described as sneaky-fast, doesn't blow the ball by anybody. Instead, he is more of an artisan, nibbling on the corners and driving opposing hitters to distraction. Like Carbo and Yastrzemski, for instance.

Carbo looked in anguish at a called third strike in the second inning. To compound his anger, the bases were loaded and two were out at the time.

Carbo had to be restrained by Johnson and

In enemy territory

With little regard for his own safety, Golden State coach Al Attles charges Washington's Mike Riordan in game's opening minutes Sunday after Riordan fouled Warriors' Rick Barry. Elvin Hayes (grabbing Riordan) and Wes Unseld and Phil Chenier (holding Attles) prevented fight and Attles was ejected from contest.

Fergie swings May pole—Dodgers, 7-3

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Joe Ferguson's road roomie, Bill Russell, was kidding him recently.

"Hey, Joey," Russell said, "why don't you go to spring training a month earlier?"

Russell was trying to discover the reason Ferguson gets off to such a dreadfully slow start at the plate year after year.

He does literally nothing in April, but come May he's on his way.

"Let's hope so, anyway," Ferguson said Sunday after drilling two home runs to help the Dodgers close out their homestand on a winning note, a 7-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

A near-capacity crowd of 53,613 (43,958 paid) was on hand as the Dodgers looked more like the club that bagged the pennant in the National League in 1974 than they had at any time the last week.

Besides Ferguson's big game, Jimmy Wynn smashed in four runs—three with his eighth home run of the season—and Don Sutton halted a two-game mini-skid with his eighth victory.

It enabled the Dodgers to close out the homestand, their first against Eastern Division opposition, with a 5-5 split. They maintain their 3½-game jump on Cincinnati in the N.L. West as they commence a demanding four-city journey beginning today in New York's Shea Stadium against the Mets.

Sutton had to leave the game after working eight innings because, as he said afterward, he simply hadn't felt well for several days.

He had enough to throttle the Cardinals on a half-dozen hits and two runs. But Jim Brewer was shaky coming out of the bullpen, giving up a run on three singles after two were out in the ninth. The bases were loaded when Luis Melendez ripped a vicious liner that Willie Crawford gloved for the final out.

The emergence of Ferguson, though, is the most heartening thing for the Dodgers.

"I've talked with (batting instructor) Mickey Vernon every day," Fergie explained. "We've figured out I've been getting my feet moving ahead of my hands and throwing my timing off. But the last five games, I've really got my confidence back. I know now that I've started hitting I'll stay that way."

Ferguson, who batted only .155 last April and .383 in May, is showing signs he'll do the same thing this year. This April he batted just .167, but in

Unser: 'Luck is everything'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "Luck," said Bobby Unser, "is everything. If you don't have luck on the race track, you can't win."

Appropriately, Unser won Sunday's Indianapolis 500 on his 13th start, dodging a terrifying wreck, and then finding himself out in front when rain stopped the race at 435 miles.

"Luck controls everything we do in our lives,"

Unser said in a post-race interview. "I've always tried to have it on my side."

Unser, who also won in 1968, when he bested his current car owner, Dan Gurney, said he felt providence guided him through the entire race.

"It turned out I was able to make pit stops at the best possible time, and when Tom Sneva crashed in front of me on the 127th lap I was somehow able to keep myself out of it,"

Unser said. "It was a helluva bad wreck. I got a little sideways coming into it, made a split-second decision to go low to miss it, and it fortunately was the right one."

"I don't know how close I was to the thing, but I know I came awfully close to being involved."

Sneva's misfortune also allowed Unser to build up his fuel mileage on the slower speed yellow light following the wreck, to the point where he felt he had enough fuel left to outrun his closest pursuers, Johnny Rutherford and A.J. Foyt.

"Just in case it came to a dash at the end, I knew I was going to be able to race hard enough and fast enough to hold off anyone," he said.

Unser, who slogged across the finish line in a pouring rain at about 30 mph, said, "I didn't know if I had to cross the finish line to win at that point. But I know it was a damn good thing to do."

The victory was also a milestone for Gurney, who never made it to Victory Lane in his nine years as a driver.

He was second twice. "I have never forgiven Bobby for beating me in 1968," Gurney said jokingly. "But I can't tell you how much it means to me to finally be on the winning end of this thing."

INDIANAPOLIS—The cloudburst that shortened Sunday's Indy 500-mile race by 26 laps sparked tempers and created near-riots among the masses of spectators who had been basking in the sun only moments before.

"We want out, we want out," chanted a beer-filled, rainsoaked youngsters who tried to crash the gates to Gasoline Alley.

Before the downpour, heat and humidity played havoc with scores of spectators. The infield hospital alone treated more than 60 heat victims, more than a third of them members of marching high school bands.

It was another disappointing 500 for three-time winner A. J. Foyt, but his name went into the record books as the all-time mileage leader in the holiday classic.

When flagged Sunday after 174 laps, the Texas speedster had logged 6,402½ miles in 18 consecutive races, records for distance and attempts.

Cliff Bergere, the former Hollywood stuntman who retired from racing in the late 1940s, had logged 6,142.5 miles in Speedway competition.

Wally Dallenbach, who led for 96 laps before his engine blew, won $14,400 in lap prize money.

Second to Dallenbach in lap money was three-time winner Foyt with $8,100. Others were: Bobby Unser $1,650, Gordon Johncock $1,200 and defending champion Johnny Rutherford $750.

Working day and night to patch up the damaged car of Duane (Pancho) Carter paid off for his crew when he finished fourth.

"The car did not run any differently and I had no qualms that it wouldn't run well. We shifted weights inside the cockpit during the first three pit stops and had everything just like we wanted."

No time to argue

Salt Walther argues with crewman after being forced into pits, one lap into Sunday's Indy 500. Walther returned to track until more problems forced him to quit his racer in favor of teammate Bob Harkey's.

BOBBY UNSER WINS

Unser said the only trouble he experienced during the race was in losing pressure from one of his tires.

"We kept changing the wrong one, and I couldn't seem to figure out where it was. The car was bouncing around."

The race was heart-breaking for the 38-year-old veteran Wally Dallenbach, who led for 96 laps before falling out to engine trouble 10 laps before the rain hit, only 10 or 15 minutes separating him from fortune.

"It's a shame," Dallenbach said. "The car was running like a dream, and I'm sure we could have gone the rest of the way like that."

The race was marred only by one serious accident, which left driver Tom Sneva with burns on his right hand, face, chest and legs.

Unser took his victory lap around the 2½-mile asphalt track in the pace car after the rain slowed to a drizzle and most of the nearly half a million spectators were on their way home, tearing down fences and creating one of the world's largest traffic jams in the process.

Unser's sleek, brilliant blue car, an Offenhauser-Eagle, took the checkered flag during the downpour at less than 40 mph. The goofy ending put a damper on one of the best contested races in a number of years, one started in brilliant sunshine and torrid heat that sent about 100 people to the track hospital with heat prostration.

UNSER dueling Foyt, Rutherford and Dallenbach right from the start.

Foyt, in search of an unprecedented fourth victory at Indianapolis, was frustrated for the eighth consecutive year as he experienced tire problems after leading 51 of the first 60 laps.

Foyt was then taken to a downtown hospital and X-rayed for a possible hip contusion. It was negative and he was released. He was hurt when a piece of metal dislodged from his dashboard, and Foyt wound up sitting on it for much of the race.

Dallenbach, a journeyman driver, took the lead at lap No. 60 and held it, with the exception of pit stops, until he burned a piston on the 161st lap. Until then, he looked a sure winner.

Both Foyt and Dallenbach found their trouble at the scene of the day's only serious wreck which involved Sneva, a 26-year-old former junior high school principal from Spokane, Wash.

The accident occurred in the 127th lap, bringing out the fourth of the day's five caution flags. Sneva tangled with rookie Eldon Rasmussen in turn two, with Sneva's car hurtling into and onto the outside wall, bursting into flame and spinning upside down on the wall, scattering spectators.

The youngster, who finished 20th in his only other start here, had to be pried out of his car with a hydraulic spreader. Mike Hiss, the 1972 rookie of the year at Indy, and rookie Larry McCoy also hit the wall in turn three in separate accidents, but neither was seriously injured.

The Sneva-Rasmussen crash spewed oil onto the track and forced the cars still running to either go up near the outside wall or run through the infield grass.

Dallenbach and Foyt chose the low route, with the former fouling his engine and the latter picking

Lauda wins Belgian Grand Prix

ZOLDER, Belgium (UPI) — Niki Lauda of Austria, driving a Ferrari, Sunday won the Belgian, Formula I Grand Prix to take the world drivers championship lead.

Lauda dominated the 70-lap race with the same style he used to capture the Monaco event two weeks ago. He crossed the line 19 seconds ahead of Jody Scheckter of South Africa with Argentina's Carlos Reutemann 41 seconds behind in third place in a Brabham.

Lauda's victory gave him 23 points in the world drivers championship to Emerson Fittipaldi's 21.

Patrick Depailler of France came in fourth and Swiss Clay Regazzoni, who established a lap record as he worked his way up the field after a pit stop on the 17th lap, was fifth.

Mark Donohue, who skipped the Indianapolis 500, came in 11th, three laps behind.

GRAND PRIX STANDINGS
Niki Lauda, Austria, 23 points; Emerson Fittipaldi, Brazil, 21; (tie) Carlos Pace, Brazil, and Carlos Reutemann, Argentina, 15; Jody Scheckter, South Africa, 15; Patrick Depailler, France 11; Joachim Mass, West Germany, 10.5; Clay Regazzoni, Switzerland, 8; James Hunt, Britain, 7; (tie) Jacky Ickx, Belgium and Ronnie Peterson, Sweden, 5; Jean-Pierre Jarier, France, 1.5; (tie) Vittorio Brambila, Italy, and Tom Pryce, Britain, 1; Lella Lombardi, Italy, 0.5.

Saugus track official dies

A track official serving as a flagman in a stock car race was killed by an out-of-control car at Saugus Speedway, authorities reported Sunday.

California Highway Patrol officers said that Charles Smith, 37, of Arleta, was kneeling at his observation post atop a three-foot-high retaining wall during a race Saturday when a car traveling at about 65 mph struck the wall just below him.

SNEVA RACING WITHIN MONTH

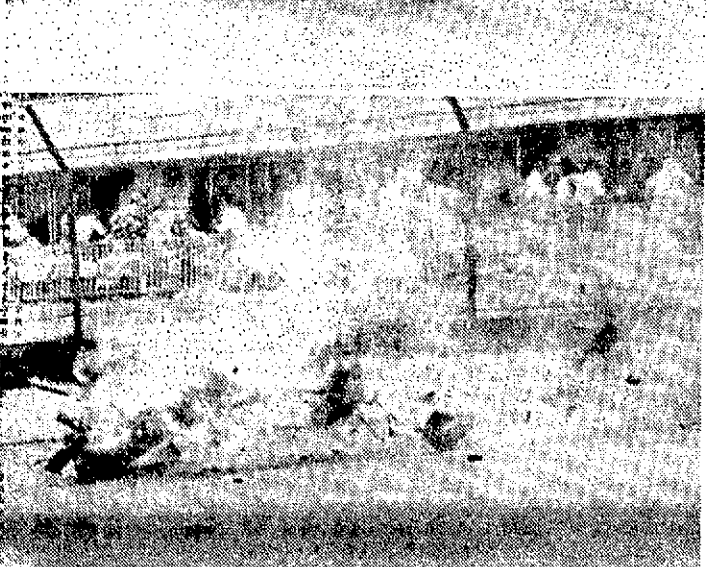

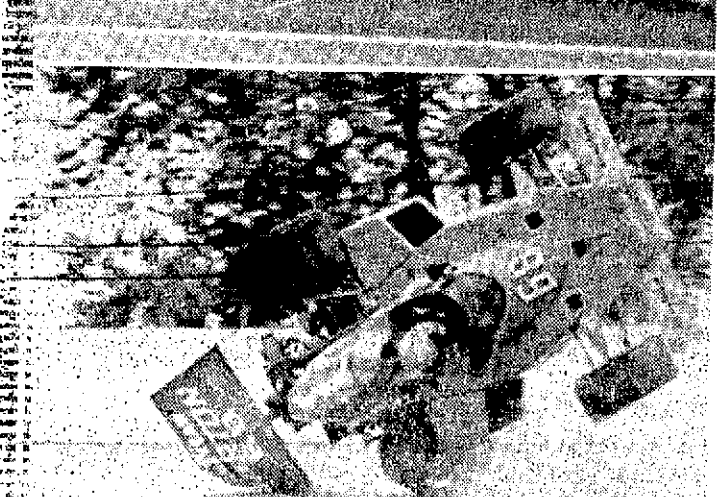

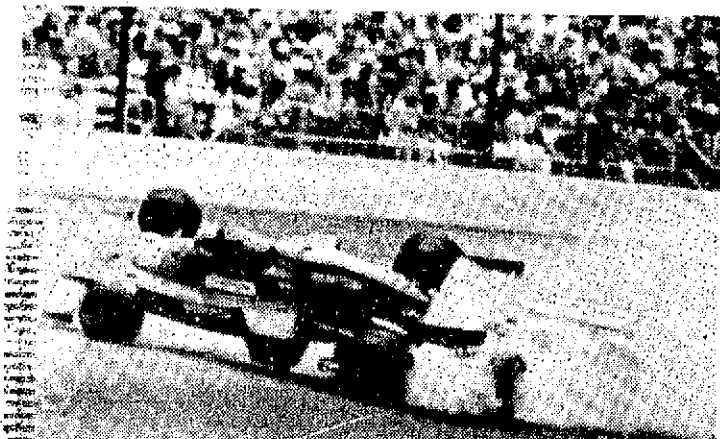

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Sneva, who walked away with minor injuries after a brutal crash in Sunday's Indianapolis 500, should be racing again within a month, friends say.

Sneva suffered burns on his hands, arms, chest and face when his car cartwheeled in flames during the race Sunday.

He was to have been transferred Monday to the University of Michigan Burn Center at Ann Arbor, but doctors decided late Sunday his injuries did not warrant the move.

Sneva's wife Sharon said he received his worst burns on the fingers of his right hand, but they appeared to be no worse than if they had been placed in a hot skillet.

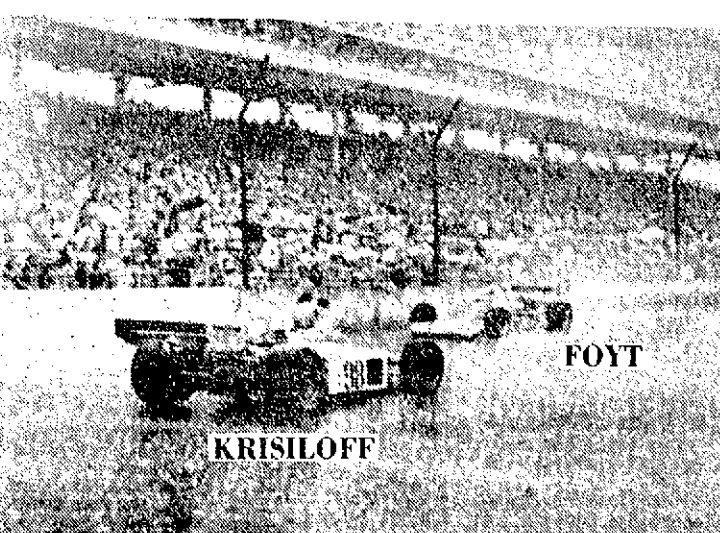

Sneva, who was visited in the hospital by Salt Walther, who was seriously injured here in 1973, was reported in good spirits and hoped to be released soon.

Lucky to be alive

Tom Sneva suffered first and second-degree burns on face, hands and chest Sunday when his car (68) tangled with Eldon Rasmussen's car (top) on 127th lap of Indy 500. Car spun, hit outside wall, flipped and disintegrated in front of VIP suites. While firemen controlled flames, Sneva was helped from shattered racer.

series, and the Most Valuable Player award.

"When we made the run at them, they died again," he said. "They're supposed to be the experienced team, but they played more like a young, inexperienced team."

"This was incredible. I've come close to winning championships before (in the NBA) but this is the first time I'm on a winner. It's a great feeling. There's nothing like it."

"This was the first game in the series in which we fell behind that I felt we were scared," admitted veteran Jeff Mullins. "We didn't seem to have the confidence that we had in the earlier games after we got behind. We looked like we were going to panic, but we got ourselves together and did the job."

For the third time in the series, the Warriors had to overcome a huge deficit. Once it was 14 points in the second quarter, when they trailed 36-22.

The Bullets surged ahead by eight points late in the final period before the Warriors began their winning comeback.

The Warriors, down 92-84, ran off eight consecutive points—six by Keith Wilkes—tying the score, 92-92.

After Elvin Hayes' foul shot with 1:55 remaining gave the Bullets a one-point lead, Butch Beard came back 10 seconds later with a field goal, putting Golden State in front, 94-93.

Washington's Dick Gibbs, a little-used reserve, muffed a chance to put the Bullets in front, missing an easy layup with 1:05 to play. Beard then closed out the Golden State scoring with a free throw with 19 seconds remaining and another foul shot in the final nine seconds.

Fisticuffs erupted at 3:38 of the first period when the Riordan roughed Barry as the Warriors' forward drove for the basket. Riordan appeared to hit Barry with a karate chop across the top of his head, and Barry countered with a right elbow to the ribs as he headed toward the basket.

Then, as Riordan and Barry appeared ready to fight, Unseld grabbed Riordan. At that moment, Attles raced onto the court, heading for Riordan. But Unseld cut off Attles, preventing further damage.

Schultz unleashes goals not punches

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Scoring goals is a nice diversion for brawny Dave Schultz, particularly in Philadelphia's most important game of the year, but he still remembers where the fun is.

"I don't know if I get that big a thrill from scoring goals," Schultz said after his first two-goal game of the season propelled the Flyers to a 5-1 nationally televised victory over Buffalo Sunday afternoon and a 3-2 edge in their Stanley Cup final.

Philadelphia can become the first team in six years to make a successful defense of the Cup by posting another victory at Buffalo Tuesday night. If a seventh game is necessary, it will be played Thursday night in the Spectrum where the Sabres have failed to win in five years.

Then, breaking into a smile, hockey's baddest man added, "I really think I get more of a kick beating hell out of someone—if it helps the team. I know the guys appreciate that. Now the guys are gonna think that I want to be a goal scorer and won't play the way I'm supposed to."

"I know what my job is," said Schultz, who set a National Hockey League record this season with 472 penalty minutes. "They don't care if I score one goal. They want me to go up and down and if I see any trouble...they tell me I help the team just by sitting on the bench."

Schultz opened the scoring with the game only 3:12 old on Philadelphia's first shot on goal and the Flyers padded their advantage to 3-0 later in the session when Gary Dornhoefer and Bob Kelly scored 19 seconds apart.

Buffalo netminder Gerry Desjardins, who allowed three goals on six shots in the third game of the finals, this time yielded the three goals on Philadelphia's first seven shots and five goals on 13 shots.

Philadelphia stretched its lead to 5-0 in the second period as Reg Leach converted on a power play and Schultz followed with his second goal at 9:56.

Wins World 600 16-year jinx ends for Petty

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Richard Petty, breaking a 16-year jinx at Charlotte Motor Speedway, scored his first triumph in the $176,530 World 600 stock car race Sunday.

Petty, who has now won 170 major races and nearly $2 million, wheeled his Dodge to victory a lap and a quarter ahead of Cale Yarborough's Chevrolet.

Asked if he thought a win at Charlotte was inevitable, Petty replied, "It's just like anything else. You work at it hard enough, long enough. You don't know that it will do you any good. You just know that's the way you do anything else."

"That's the way we approached it. We didn't do anything different for this race than we did last year or the last time we ran it," he said. "We know that all the good luck came our way and some of the bad luck went the other way."

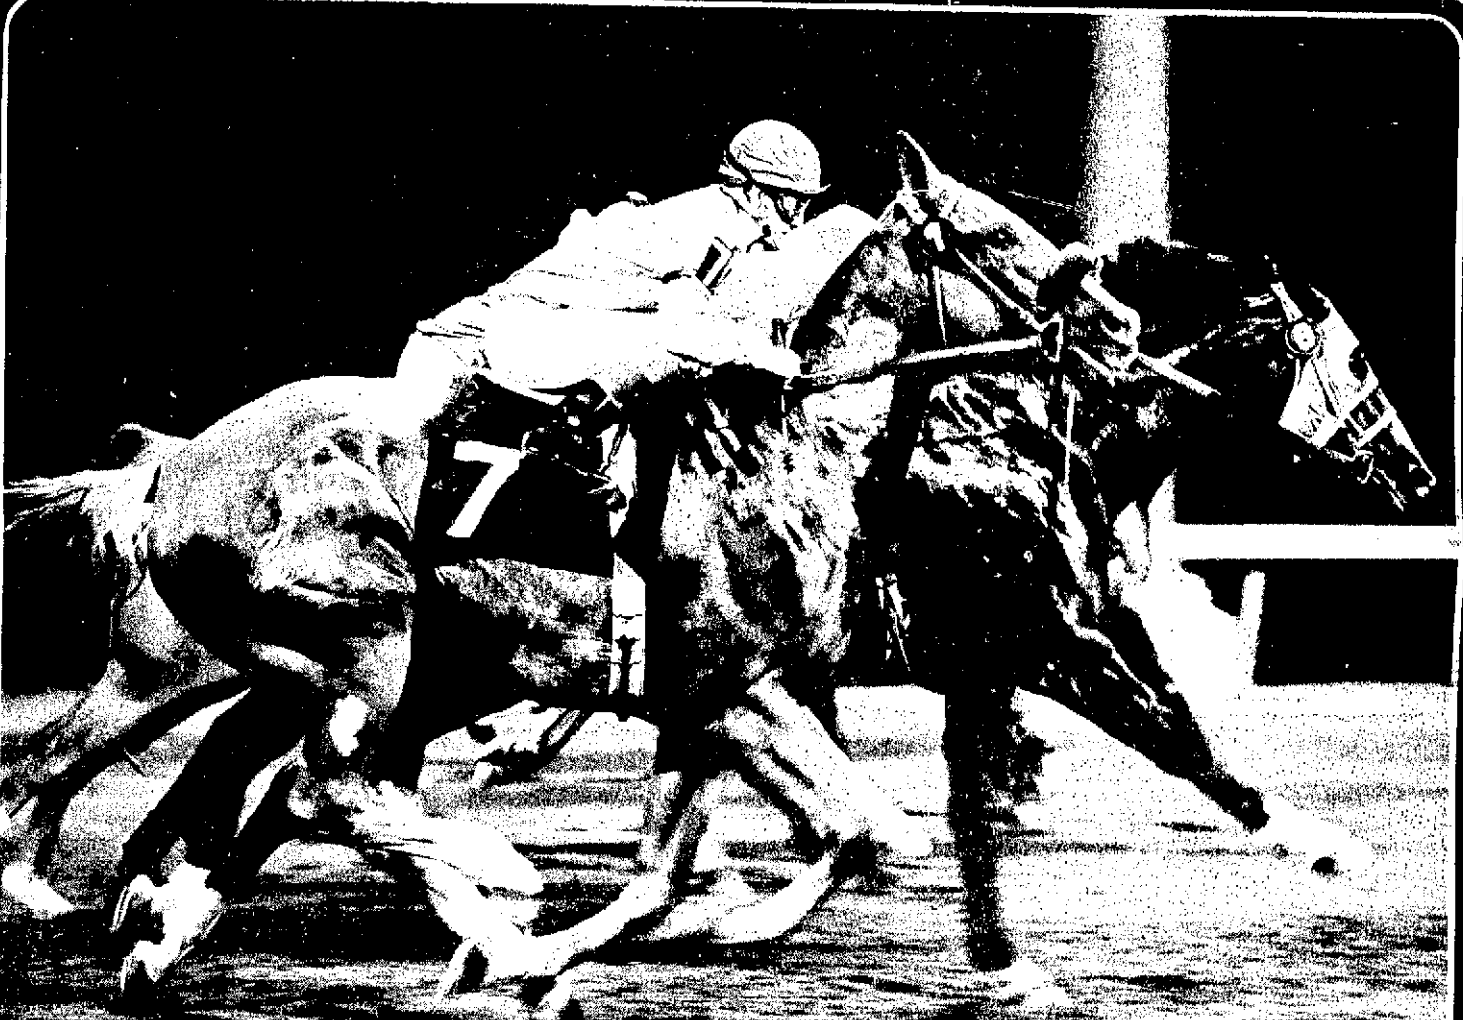

The Randleman, N.C. driver took command of the race at the 247-mile mark during a caution flag. Petty gained the lead from Yarborough after beating his rival back to the track after each made a pit stop. Petty led for most of the remaining laps.

David Pearson, who started his Mercury from the pole position, finished third.

The 37-year-old Petty, who has won more money than any other Grand National driver, led the grueling 600-mile race six times for 234 laps. Yarborough held the lead on seven occasions for 149 laps. The victory earned Petty $27,100, putting him about $75,000 short of the $2 million mark.

U.S. track team hold meet on Great Wall

Combined News Services
The Great Wall of China has been standing more than 2,000 years now, defying man, the elements and the imagination, but it wasn't until Sunday that anyone ever came up the wild, mind-boggling idea of running a race on it.

Don Merrick of Deland, Fla., Bob Ware of Bowling Green, Ky., Tommy Haynes of Nashville, Tenn., and Milan Tiff of Los Angeles, members of the U.S. track and field team competing in a series of goodwill meets in the People's Republic of China, had the brainstorm for staging the great race.

SPORTS BEAT

All between the ages of 19 and 25, they had to be young to do what they did

Sunday, Tiff, the winner, laughingly confessed all four nearly collapsed from exhaustion at the finish.

"Our first thought was of the Americans who climbed Mt. Everest, so we felt this was an opportunity to take part in a feat like that," said Tiff.

"Four of us started out, but Don and I were the only two who kept going. We almost collapsed when we finished because it's so steep. It's just too hard to keep going. When I finally got to the top, I got a little rock and scratched my name in the wall. It was sort of like putting the flag on top of the moon."

ALL-AMERICA Adrian Dantley, the nation's second leading scorer last year, withdrew his name as a hardship case in the National Basketball Association draft.

Dantley, a Notre Dame junior, said he submitted his withdrawal letter Friday.

AMERICAN LEAGUE president Lee MacPhail Sunday upheld a three-day suspension and a $250 fine levied against player-manager Frank Robinson of the Cleveland Indians for his altercation with umpire Jerry Neudecker in Chicago on May 17.

The original fine and suspension had been levied against Robinson by MacPhail last week, but Robinson had appealed the decision on the grounds that he had been provoked by Neudecker.

BRIEFLY: Members of the PGA Tournament Players Division, upset with elimination of the Tournament of Champions, have scheduled a meeting Tuesday in Atlanta with commissioner Deane Beman to find out why the T of C was dropped. Olympic officials have seven months to decide who are the amateurs eligible to compete in the 1976 Winter Games. By the end of the year, entries will be submitted for the Games at Innsbruck in February. The International Olympic Committee wants to eliminate all "professionals." The Southwest Conference, which took the bold step of lie detector tests to assist in recruiting violations, decided not to write any drastic cost saving legislation until the NCAA takes the initial step.

still the master, winning eight holes and losing five after jumping off to the 6-up advantage.

"I played well and I kept my composure most of the time," said the 19-year-old Long Beach State star who continually fights his temper because he calls himself a "perfectionist."

"I lost my timing overnight," said Lopp, a 37-year-old former Poly High golf captain. "You can't lose five holes in a row and beat a player like Tony. He's young, strong and he can do more than just hit it a long way. He's a very fine putter."

Averaging well over 250 yards off the tee, even though he used a 3-wood half the time, Campregher medalled 74 to lead 7-up after 18 holes and was 3-over on the final 11 holes despite four penalty strokes.

Campregher displayed his awesome strength on the fifth hole in the afternoon when he hit his first ball out of bounds and then drove over the green, a prodigious wallop of 325 yards.

The mustachioed Campregher, shockingly, won the hole with a bogey five when Lopp hit long out of a fairway trap, chipped poorly and 3-putted.

"That really hurt him," said Tony, who has won the Long Beach and Los Angeles medal play championships, the Meadowlark club title and the Champion of Champions tournament since last August.

Down 10 after the disastrous 23rd, Lopp pulled himself together, winning the 25th, 26th and 28th holes. Campregher helped him on the 25th, hitting out of bounds, but Lopp had only a 12-footer for birdie.

Lopp's first legitimate birdie came on the next hole when he chipped in from 45 feet. He lost the 27th when his drive hit the fence, but he prolonged the match by holing a 12-foot birdie on the 28th.

Lopp had counted on Campregher missing the fairways and it turned out that Keith hit only one in

Nice guy finishes first at Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Gene Littler, "the epitome of what professional golf is all about," shot a 6-under-par 66 Sunday to win the Danny Thomas Memphis Golf Classic by five strokes with a 72-hole total of 270.

The victory earned Littler, who came back from cancer surgery to rejoin the tour in 1972, $35,000 and pushed his earnings this year to $110,555.

It was the second tour victory this year for Littler, who also won the Bing Crosby Pro-Am in January.

Littler began the final round on the 7,193-yard Colonial Country Club course tied with John Mahaffey at 12 under par. Mahaffey shot 71 Sunday to finish second at 275.

Tom Weiskopf, who bogeyed the finishing hole, and Jack Nicklaus, who barely missed an eagle putt on the 18th, tied for third at 277.

"It's always nice to win," Littler said, "but this one is especially nice."

"I've been playing here since 1958 and I've come close several times, including a couple of play-offs, but this is the first time I've taken it all."

"I just played steady golf," he said, "and I putted super, especially when I started out."

"If I can't win this golf tournament," a disappointed Mahaffey said, "to me it's the best thing in the world to see Gene Littler win."

"He's the epitome of what professional golf is all about," Mahaffey said. "The 27-year-old Mahaffey has won only one tournament, the 1973 Sahara Invitational, in his four years on the tour. He has finished second a number of times."

"Second is better than third," Mahaffey said, "but first beats the hell out of everything. I've been second so many times. It seems like it happens every time I get something going—Johnny Miller (who did not compete in Memphis) or someone makes all those birdies."

Littler began his final round with birdies on the first four holes. He picked up an additional birdie and one bogey on the front nine and held a three-stroke lead at the turn.

He bogeyed No. 10 and seemed in danger of being overtaken by a charging Weiskopf, who played the first nine holes in a course record 6-under 30, including an eagle when he holed out with a 7-iron on No. 2.

Weiskopf, however, managed only one additional birdie on the back nine and had two bogeys, including the one at 18. On the final hole, he drove into a clump of trees and needed two shots to get back into the fairway.

Nicklaus, who started the day tied with Weiskopf for third five strokes behind the leaders, shot a closing 68 but said he drove and putted poorly. He never was able to mount a charge despite noting Saturday that he was only five strokes back and had overcome that deficit before.

SPORTS CHATTER: Pepperdine beat out Iowa when it signed 6-10 basketball center Ray Ellis of San Gabriel High. "I sure hope I can get him," said Iowa coach Lute Olson when he visited the Southland a couple of months ago. Football follower Art Judge of Cypress is the first to hit the desk with a pre-season college all-America team. Among his selections are offensive tackle Marvin Powell and defensive tackle Gary Jeter of USC and quarterback John Sciarra of UCLA. UCLA center Ralph Drollinger was a first-team academic all-America selection of the College Sports Information Directors of America. Not that he didn't deserve the honor, but Drollinger wasn't first team for the Bruins after the early part of the season. Steve Copp of San Diego State, hotly pursued by UCLA as a prep, and USC's John Lambert were second-team choices. "It's said USC track coach Verne Wolfe may abandon his plans for retirement after the Trojan victory in the Pacific-8 championships. Wolfe has the nucleus of another title team in 1976. Said NBC announcer Maury Wills during Saturday's Detroit-Chicago baseball game: "I feel you have to tie the score before you can go ahead." You're absolutely right, Maury. Santa Clara has signed standout basketball player Matt Maderos from Chico. He led his Pleasant Valley High School team to a 28-2 record while averaging 22.6 points. His father is George Maderos, former San Francisco 49er linebacker and Chico State football coach. Chuck Steinman sends a reminder that June 15 is the deadline for those who want to sign up for the Trojan Club trip to the Bay Area for the USC-California football game on Nov. 1. Send reservations to Steinman, 211 12th Street, Seal Beach, CA, 90740. Phil Brus, who transferred from Cal two years ago, was a standout quarterback in Oregon's spring game in which the Ducks defeated the Alumni, 29-7. He completed four of five passes and, with freshman Jack Henderson, will push sophomore redshirt Jerry Jurich for the starting position in the fall. The Presidents Council of the Pacific-8 rejected a recommendation by the coaches to hold a post-season basketball tournament and add a third member to officiating teams. Then, just to demonstrate it is economy minded, the council voted to continue participating in the National Commissioners Invitational Tournament, a nothing affair pushed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association to drive Madison Square Garden's National Invitational Tournament out of business. Bob Cooper, who gleamed his baseball skills while performing for Lakewood High, Long Beach CC and Long Beach State, is the new head coach at Glendale Hoover High. Cooper had Elsinore High teams in the CIF playoffs five of seven years and won the I-A title in 1970. With LBCC coach Joe Hicks ending rumors of his retirement, it appears his chief assistant, Bobby Myers, will be leaving the Vikings.

Ancient Title tops Californian's roll

Ancient Title, a 5-year-old who was California's horse of the year in 1974, heads a field of 10 in today's $100,000 Memorial Day feature race at Hollywood Park, the Californian.

The son of Gummo has won 12 stakes races in his career and a total of $550,370 for Ethel B. Kirkland.

Laffit Piney has the ride in the 1 1/16-mile classic. However, Hollywood Park's leading rider, Sandy Hawley, will be aboard Big Band, the winner of the Los Angeles Handicap on April 27.

June's Love, considered one of the favorites for the Californian, was destroyed early Saturday after he Producer's night life leads to 'Sky Heist'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

If NBC's World Premiere movie tonight seems authentic, there is a reason. It's about the Los Angeles Sheriff's air patrol, and the producer-writer is a reserve sheriff's deputy.

The movie is called "Sky Heist," and it's the brainchild of Rick Rosner, 33. He is a sharp Hollywood executive who spends his days in an office suite at Warner Brothers studio.

One night a week he changes his fancy duds for a deputy's uniform and prowls the Sunset Strip in a squad car or hunts robbers from a helicopter.

"What is a Jewish boy from Englewood, N.J., doing in a deputy's uniform?" Rosner himself asks the question, and he has an answer:

"It all started five years ago when I was producing 'The Steve Allen Show.' We were always looking for stunts that Steve could do, and we decided to have him take scuba lessons.

"So we got a tank on-stage, and we invited members of the Sheriff's Rescue Unit to teach Steve.

"I got interested, and the deputies invited me to take the training. I had been a swimmer in college, so I decided to try it. After I had gone out on dives with them, they suggested that I go through the Sheriff's Academy.

"I decided I would go to one session, simply as a gesture. Well, I was hooked. It was like a visit to Disneyland, going to classes about arrest procedures to judo lessons to the pistol range.

For six months Rosner spent all day Sundays and Monday nights at the academy. He graduated second in a class of 35 and first in pistol shooting. He became a reserve deputy at a salary of $1 per year—"but they don't take out any deductions."

He's been at it ever since.

One of Rosner's assignments has been to accompany regular deputies on air searches and surveillances, and that's how "Sky Heist" originated.

"The Sheriff's Aero Bureau is the largest in the country," said Rosner enthusiastically. "It is literally 'the eyes of the sky,' and I am convinced that no law-enforcement agency can function properly without one."

Rosner concocted a script that involves a rescue-bijack, and Warner Brothers made it with Joe Campanella and Don Meredith as deputies.

"NBC liked it for a series," said the producer, "but we didn't make the fall schedule because of the need for 'family hour' shows. But the actors are still on 'hold' and we might get on in January."

deputy at a salary of $1 per year—"but they don't take out any deductions."

He's been at it ever since.

One of Rosner's assignments has been to accompany regular deputies on air searches and surveillances, and that's how "Sky Heist" originated.

"The Sheriff's Aero Bureau is the largest in the country," said Rosner enthusiastically. "It is literally 'the eyes of the sky,' and I am convinced that no law-enforcement agency can function properly without one."

Rosner concocted a script that involves a rescue-bijack, and Warner Brothers made it with Joe Campanella and Don Meredith as deputies.

"NBC liked it for a series," said the producer, "but we didn't make the fall schedule because of the need for 'family hour' shows. But the actors are still on 'hold' and we might get on in January."
